SUMMARY.

Advices received from Paris report that M. Kerensky has arrived back in Petrograd.

It is stated he is at the head of 200,000 men, and that fighting is going on in the streets.

It is reported from several sources that there has been a veritable battle in the streets of Petrograd.

The Cossacks and the moderate troops have placed the extremist troops in a difficult position.

The revolt against the Bolsheviks is said to be increasing in Petrograd.

A despatch from Haparanda announces the overthrow of the Bolshevik and the establishment in power of a new organisation.

This organisation has been named the All Russian Committee, for saving of the country and revolution.

Russian messages confirm the news that the Provisional Government has regained control.

The Washington correspondent of the New York "Times" believes that Bolshevik rule could not endure.

The outbreak, he says, furnishes an opportunity for a strong man to assume control and establish orderly administration.

The United Press correspondent at Petrograd says the Kerensky party may keep up a semblance of war.

That is the most that is to be expected of Russia now, the correspondent adds.

The Lenin Government on Saturday issued a manifesto inviting all the belligerents to commence peace negotiations.

A Petrograd correspondent interprets M. Lenin's speech before the Soviet to mean that Germany must accept democracy.

An Italian report says that in the neighbourhood of Asiago the enemy captured advance posts at Gallio and Monte Ferragh.

"We repulsed the enemy on the Valdobbiadene heights," the message continues, "and crossed to the right bank of the Piave."

A German message reports that strong bodies of Italians have pressed back their forces near Asiago.

M. Painleve, French Premier, is confident, notwithstanding the gravity and strength of the blow, Italy's perils will be surmounted.

Some correspondents believe that the Italians cannot long hold the Piave line.

The enemy's capture of Belluno and progress up the Sugana Valley tend to inspire anxiety.

The fighting in the Passchendaele region has been of an exceptionally severe character.

The British five times attacked the crater land between Poelcapelle and Passchendaele, a German report says.

A raid by the enemy westward of Lens was repulsed by the British.

A French communique reports that there is a lively artillery struggle in Belgium on the Paregood sector.

The British forces in East Africa continue to make progress. They recently captured 142 Germans.

In Palestine the British have progressed in the neighbourhood of Esdud.

A large body of the enemy was captured near Huj, and 12 guns.

A Washington message says an army of skilled workmen will accompany America's aviators to France.

Plans have been matured for a double aeroplane programme, furnishing 50,000 machines, and 100,000 engines.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) opened the conscription referendum campaign at Bendigo last night.

The terms of the proposal to which the electors were asked to agree was that voluntary enlistment should continue.

The number of reinforcements required was 7000 per month.

Compulsory reinforcements would be called up by ballot to the extent to which voluntary enlistment failed to supply the number.

The ballot will be from among single men only between the ages of 20 and 44 years.

This class is to include widowers and divorced men without children dependent on them.

Persons in particular industries, ministers of religion, and others whose service would cause hardship to dependents are exempt.

Eligible males of families represented at the front shall not be balloted for until the others are called up.

All ballots are to be so conducted that families will contribute as nearly as practicable pro rata.

In no case will the sole remaining eligible member of a family represented at the front be called up.

Mr. Hughes concluded by saying that the Government must have power to ensure reinforcements.

"It cannot govern the country without that power, and will not attempt to do so," he said.

Mr. Cook, Minister for the Navy, speaking at a reception, denied there was dissension in the Cabinet over the conscription proposals.

The Cabinet, he said, was unanimously behind the Prime Minister, and would adhere as one man to the scheme.

Flight Lieutenant Stutt established an aviation record as far as Australia is concerned yesterday.

Leaving Melbourne yesterday morning at 6 o'clock he arrived at the Richmond Aerodrome at 2.30 p.m.

The actual flying time for the trip was 7 hours 10 minutes, or an average of 80 miles per hour.

The highest altitude attained during the flight was between 11,000 and 12,000 feet.

Another contingent of invalid soldiers will arrive from Melbourne to-morrow by four special trains.

A meeting called in the interests of the prohibition movement was held in the Town Hall yesterday afternoon.

The object was to urge the Government to make provision for a poll on the bare majority principle.

As a matter of fact, the meeting, by an overwhelming majority, decided that the issue should be postponed "until after the war."

Mr. James, Minister for Education, speaking at Gloucester yesterday, said the Truancy Act was working well.

The attendances in all the school had increased over 5 per cent. during the year.

Three unions, whose registrations were cancelled owing to their participation in the recent strike, have applied for re-registration.

These are the Tramway Union, Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association, and Coal Lumpers' Union.

The Minister for Customs yesterday announced the sale to the Imperial Government of 50,000,000lb of Australian jam.

Of this quantity 12,000,000lb are to go to England, and the balance, 38,000,000lb, to the United States.

The trial of the strike leaders—Kavanagh, Thompson, Willis, and Buckley—was concluded yesterday.

The jury failed to agree on their verdict, and were locked up for the night.

Business opened rather quietly on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and on the whole firm prices ruled.

Business was slow in all metal lines yesterday. Oils were steady at late rates.

A heavy demand ruled for new-laid eggs in Sussex-street yesterday.

New-laid consignments commanded from 1/ to 1/1, while for case eggs 10d to 11d was asked.

The market was practically bare of medium-weight hams. Bacon was also scarce.

The Minister for Agriculture states that no new seasons' wheat can be received at country railway stations at present.

Forecast.—Some showers and thunder over the eastern half of the State, otherwise fine; southerly winds; cooler generally.

SHOP AT SNOW'S.

"TO-DAY IS A NEW DAY. IT IS TOO DEAR, WITH ITS HOPES AND INVITATIONS, TO WASTE A MOMENT ON THE YESTERDAYS."

So said Emerson. And one of the daily pleasures for every woman should be the morning perusal of SNOW'S announcements. Every morning we announce something new in Seasonable and Useful Apparel, and always at Snow's Economy Prices. For instance, at present we are holding

SNOW'S 10 DAYS OF UNDER-PRICED UNDERWEAR.

And then, again, we are making a magnificent display of

WHITE BLOUSE AND SKIRT MATERIALS AT SNOW'S ECONOMICAL PRICES.

And Snow's positively assure their customers that in offering to-day what we bought 18 months ago we are quoting PRICES LOWER THAN THOSE IN MANCHESTER TO-DAY.

Every woman must have at least one White Blouse in among her coloured and black Evening and Visiting Blouses.

So to-day we suggest White Pique and White Cotton Voiles.

We have 40-inch double width White Cotton Voiles, at 11½d, 12½d, 1/3, 1/4½, 1/6½, 1/9½, 1/11½, 2/3, and 2/6½ per yard.

A Special Superfine Quality, extra wide, 54 inches, at 2/4½, 3/3, and 3/6.

Then there is our popular 40-inch Double-width White Pique, which has risen in market prices as much as Cotton Voile, but which Snow's are still able to offer you at the old prices of 1/6½, 1/11½, 2/3, 2/6½, and 2/11½.

AND IF YOU HAVE A WHITE PIQUE SKIRT ALREADY, BUT DESIRE A CHANGE,

we suggest a Skirt Length of our recently-opened White Gabardine. It is a really fine cloth, soft and smooth to the touch, and sells at the moderate price of 2/11½ per yard.

Of course, these four materials are only mentioned to give you an idea of Snow's Economical Prices. There is a wealth of interest for those who visit our White Display on the First Floor.

LIFE IS A MENU—

and some people never get beyond the Soup. Success in life is not to be obtained without work and study, any more than it is in housekeeping. But any woman will tell you that simplifies the problem. It provides the middle course without any work on your part other than opening the tin. "Rex" Camp Pie is ready to eat. It is a concoction of the choicest meats, cooked and seasoned to a nicety, then packed in a fine jelly.

For Lunch or Dinner, with any salad, it never fails to please. You can slice it thin and make sandwiches that will be eaten with the greatest relish.

Good to have a tin or two on hand in case of emergency. See your grocer about it to-day.

HEAN'S TONIC NERVE NUTS STOP NERVE STRAIN.

After a tiring day you're apt to sleep badly. Next day finds you unrefreshed. Give your tired nerves a little help by taking HEAN'S TONIC NERVE NUTS. They "pull you together," and are the best "bracer" procurable.

Rev. HUGH DUNLOP, 6 Linthorpe-street, Newtown, writing on August 7, 1917, said:

Referring to my letter of 12th April, 1917, thanking you for benefits received by me from a judicious course of Hean's Tonic Nerve Nuts, I write to say that it is now four weeks since I left off taking the above. I am thankful to report that my health has so far improved that I can walk without a stick now, and I am free from nervous and other exhausting pains. This happy (to me) state of health I attribute to the excellent properties of your Tonic Nerve Nuts.

HEAN'S TONIC NERVE NUTS are stocked by all leading Chemists and Stores, or they may be obtained by post from G. W. HEAN, Manufacturing Chemist, 178 Castlereagh-street, Sydney. The price is 3/ per box, containing 12 days' supply; or [illegible]

CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

STRIKE PROSECUTIONS.

JURY LOCKED UP FOR THE NIGHT.

The trial of Edward John Kavanagh, Claude Thompson, Albert Charles Willis, and Arthur William Buckley for alleged conspiracy in connection with the recent strike in Sydney was continued in the Criminal Court, before his Honor Mr. Justice Pring at Darlinghurst yesterday. Mr. Blacket, K.C., and Mr. Broomfield (instructed by Mr. Bathgate, of the Crown Law Office) appeared to prosecute. Mr. Windeyer, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.), appeared for Willis; Mr. Gannon, K.C., and Mr. Collins (instructed by Mr. McMahon) appeared for Buckley; Mr. Watt and Mr. V. McGhie (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.) for Kavanagh; and Mr. Sheridan (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.) for Thompson.

The indictment reads:—

(1) For that they on July 26, 1917, and on divers others days thereafter, at Sydney, did among themselves and with Dan Clyne, John Kearney, and divers other persons whose names to the Attorney-General are unknown, unlawfully and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to instigate certain persons employed in the service of the Railway Commissioners for New South Wales to do an act in the nature of a strike.

(2) Further, that the accused on July 26, and on divers other days thereafter, did, among themselves and with Dan Clyne, John Kearney, and divers other persons whose names are unknown, unlawfully and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to counsel, procure, incite, and command divers persons being employees of the Railway Commissioners for New South Wales unlawfully to break their contracts of service as such employees as aforesaid.

(3) Further, that they, on July 26 and on divers other days thereafter, at Sydney, did, among themselves and with Dan Clyne, John Kearney, and divers other persons whose names are unknown, unlawfully and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to prevent the Railway Commissioners of New South Wales from carrying on the railway and tramway services of the State, and from exercising and performing their duties on this behalf.

Mr. Windeyer asked his Honor to direct the jury that the minutes of the Defence Committee's meetings were not evidence against all the accused.

His Honor said he intended to direct the jury that the minutes were evidence against Kavanagh only.

Mr. Windeyer contended that the Crown case had failed. There was not the slightest evidence of conspiracy against any of the accused. What was the strike the Crown relied on? Was it the strike of August 2 or a later strike? Willis did not appear on the scene until well on in August. If it was a later strike what was that strike? These men left their employment on August 2 as a protest against the introduction of the card system. It had been established that, after a certain date, these men were no longer employees of the Railway Commissioner. Surely, if a man or a body of men did not care for the conditions under which they worked they had a right to protest. Had it been shown that any one of the accused had devised the strike? Was it not proved that they all came in after the heads of unionism had commenced the strike? Why were these hotheads not standing their trial, instead of the accused? These hotheads reported they were against the card system, and said to the council, "We are going to strike." These men in the dock had endeavoured to bring about a settlement. Their every effort was towards promoting a settlement. It was known that Willis advocated the taking of a ballot. Willis specially attended the council to advocate the ballot. Yet he was one of the men picked on to stand his trial for conspiracy. Why? Because he was an intelligent man, because some of them considered him a dangerous man to the community. Was he? He contended they would have no difficulty in finding Willis not guilty. There were only two pieces of evidence against Willis. One, that he armed himself with a permit to travel on the railways. The Crown relied on this to show Willis brought about the strike. One wondered why the Crown persisted in the case against Willis. The only other evidence was that Willis spoke in the Domain. Was there one word proved from those speeches that Willis showed a determination to bring the men out?

Mr. Blacket said Kavanagh possibly saw that this strike was doomed to failure from the outset. Had he withdrawn then there would have been no charge against him. But it was clearly proved that right from the outset he aided the men, and determined to do all in his power to bring the men out, and so prevent the Railway Commissioners from carrying on the railway and tramway services of the country. There was an extraordinary conflict between the evidence and the statement of Kavanagh. It was apparent Kavanagh was a great leader of the men, and that the men gave weight to his views. They were told of his activities in other strikes in settling them. But look at the weight that would be given to the fact of the presence of the Hon. E. J. Kavanagh, M.L.C., at the head of affairs. Yet he told them he was only a paid servant. Kavanagh, as secretary was entrusted with the drafting of the ultimatum in such terms as he thought fit. There they found him working actively in the interests of the committee. He was in favour of their purpose, and assisted in every direction to carry out their desires. Kavanagh was the official mouthpiece of the committee, and was the only man who was to give information to the press. Buckley had written to the Defence Committee advising certain action. On August 8 Buckley knew of the illegal purpose of the committee, and yet advised them to continue their illegal acts. With regard to Willis, his speeches in the Domain formed the substance of the charge against him. But he (Mr. Blackett) wanted to impress the jury with the fact, firstly, that Willis in those speeches put himself forward as a leader of the strikers; and, secondly, that Willis put himself forward as a man who had assisted the committee to do what had been done up to that time. As to Thompson, it seemed strange that he, as secretary of the association, should be unaware of what was happening until all the men were out on August 2. His telegrams of August 2, "All loco. men cease work forthwith," were sufficient. The man who was directly responsible for ordering out these loco. men was Thompson, who, up till August 12, was working busily to get the men out, and keep them out. They also had in evidence the fact that Thompson gave Cline instructions to foment the strike in Queensland.

JUDGE'S SUMMING UP.

His Honor, in summing up, said they were rightly told the Crown must make out its case beyond reasonable doubt. It was said—and rightly so—that this was a case of circumstantial evidence. In conspiracy they seldom had anything else. When persons conspired they did not allow their communications to be known. In considering circumstantial evidence the circumstances must point to the guilt of the accused, and must not be consistent with any other reasonable or rational conclusion. Conspiracy was an agreement or combination between two or more persons to do some illegal act. He wanted them to take these men separately, see what they had done, what they had said, and what they had written. Look in what direction this pointed. For what purposes were these things done? Why did they write or why did they speak? Consider if what they did was with one purpose in view. Then consider whether, beyond reasonable doubt, they acted together. What one man said or did was not evidence against the others, unless they were satisfied the men were acting together. The minutes were not evidence against any of the accused except Kavanagh. They did not know whether what was written down in the minute-books was correct. They had no evidence that the men mentioned as being present at the meetings were present. As to Thompson, a large number of telegrams were put in. They were not evidence against the other accused. After defining a strike, his Honor said there was no doubt that the men ceased work with a view to compelling the Commissioner to accede to their demands on the question of the introduction of the card system. It had been argued that the introduction of the card system did not mean a change in the working conditions. His view was that the introduction of the card system was a change in the conditions. Conspiracy was a hard thing to prove, and if there was a reasonable doubt the accused must be given the benefit of it.

Mr. Windeyer urged his Honor to direct the jury that the urging of men who were out to remain out on strike was not an overt act under any count. Further, that the urging of the men to stay out was no evidence of prior concert to bring the men out.

His Honor declined to do so.

The foreman of the jury asked if persons other than the accused brought about the strike or conspired to bring about the strike, and, after having done so, went and saw the accused or each of them, and told them to bring out other men, would it be regarded as conspiracy.

His Honor said he did not think that would amount to an agreement or combination.

The foreman: Supposing the accused persons did not conspire, but after the men were on strike these men then did prevent or attempt to prevent the railways and tramways being conducted, how would it be regarded?

His Honor said in that event the accused would come under the third count.

The foreman: But, supposing there was no agreement in the first place?

His Honor: There must be an agreement, combination, or concert.

The jury retired at 3.12 p.m. to consider their verdict.

JURY ASKS FOR DIRECTIONS.

At 5.45 p.m. the jury returned into court to ask for directions.

The foreman: The strike having taken place, can there be conspiracy under any one of the three counts by helping to continue that strike?

His Honor: Under the third count that is conspiracy to prevent the Railway Commissioner carrying on the railway services.

The foreman: Then we take it, if we find under the first and second count—I do not want to anticipate the verdict of the jury—that there had been no conspiracy beforehand or at any time by the accused to bring about the strike, can we say, relying on your ruling regarding the third count, that they are guilty of conspiracy by helping to continue the strike?

His Honor: Provided they agreed together.

The foreman: Even though they took no part to bring about the strike?

His Honor: I think so. I forgot to mention the evidence of character in my summing up. You are entitled to take into consideration, if you have a doubt as to their guilt, their previous good character. It may weigh down in their favour.

The foreman: Does that mean that if we find on the third count that they conspired to carry on the strike, then we take into consideration, and give them the benefit of, their particular dealings in other strikes, and that this must outweigh their guilt?

His Honor: No. If you come to the conclusion that they are guilty their character will be of no avail to you. But if you have a doubt as to their guilt, then you will take into consideration their previous good character, and it may weigh in their favour.

The jury again retired at 6.5 p.m.

JURY LOCKED UP.

At 9.5 p.m. the jury returned to court, and, in answer to his Honor, said they had agreed on the first and second counts, but not on the third. Would his Honor accept their verdict on the first two counts?

His Honor: No.

The jury at 9.10 p.m. were locked up for the night.

CHARGE AGAINST OWENS.

Frank Owens, secretary of the New South Wales branch of the Federated Liquor Trades, was charged with having, on August 14, and on other days thereafter, at Sydney, conspired, combined, confederated, and agreed with Travers Frost, and with divers other persons whose names were unknown, to instigate certain persons in the employ of Schweppe's, Ltd., to do an act in the nature of a strike. He was further charged with having conspired, combined, confederated, and agreed with Travers Frost, and divers other persons whose names were unknown, to prejudice and impoverish a certain company, to wit, Schweppe's, Ltd., and to prevent and hinder the said company from carrying on its trade and business in the manufacture and supply of mineral waters and cordials.

Mr. Windeyer, K.C., and Mr. Watt (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.) appeared for the accused. Mr. Broomfield (instructed by Mr. Bathgate of the Crown Law Office), appeared for the Crown.

Upon the indictment being read, and before the accused had pleaded, Mr. Windeyer, took the point that he desired to preserve his rights, under section 393 of the Crimes Act. The prosecution alleged substantially different conspiracies, and must elect to proceed on a definite count. The Crown could arraign accused afresh. Before the accused pleaded he asked for particulars.

Mr. Broomfield said the particulars were contained in the depositions. They would not go outside of those matters in the depositions. As to Mr. Windeyer's contention, he would not object to the preservation of their rights.

Mr. Windeyer said that so long as their rights were preserved he would not go on with the point. But he must ask for better particulars than were contained in the depositions. They had been considerably hampered by the lack of particulars of the alleged conspiracy.

His Honor said the accused would have to plead.

Accused pleaded not guilty. He was remanded to come up for trial when called on. Mr. Broomfield explained that the principal witness, Mr. Paul, was in a hospital. Accused was allowed bail, himself in £200, and one surety of £200.

LAW REPORT.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly, Mr. Justice Gordon, and Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

THE NARROMINE TRAGEDY.

The King v Melzer.

Mr. Shand, K.C., and Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by Mr. L. G. B. Cadden (agent for Messrs. M'Guinn and M'Guinn, of Dubbo), appeared for John Ernest Moss Melzer, in support of an appeal against his conviction and sentence; and Mr. C. A. White, instructed by the Crown Solicitor (Mr. J. V. Tillett), to oppose. The prisoner was convicted at the Assize Court, Dubbo, before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 12, in October last, of the murder of Zena Audrey Hill, a child of five years, whose body was found in a chaff shed at Narromine. He was sentenced to death, and now appealed mainly on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, and unreasonable. There were also other grounds relating to the admission of evidence, and certain points in his Honor's summing up. It was admitted, however, that Mr. Justice Pring, in summing up to the jury, properly told them that the evidence being circumstantial must be such as to exclude every other reasonable hypothesis than that of the guilt of the accused; but it was contended by Mr. Shand that the evidence was open to another reasonable hypothesis, and prisoner should therefore have been acquitted.

The Court, upon the conclusion of argument, reserved judgment.

Shearon, of Phillip-street, Sydney, photographic artist. The plaintiff claimed £150 in connection with a diamond ring, and £30 for its alleged detention, by the defendant. The latter denied detention, and alleged that the ring in dispute was not the property of the plaintiff.

The case is part heard.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and Juries.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

MALICIOUSLY WOUNDING.

Henry John Elliott Swanborough, who was convicted on two counts, one of having, at Redfern, on September 26, maliciously wounded Frederick Hanson with intent to do grievous bodily harm; and the other with having maliciously wounded Frederick Hanson with intent to prevent the lawful apprehension of one, Melrose, was brought up for sentence. He was sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol for twelve months on each count, sentences to be concurrent. Mr. Hogarth appeared for the accused.

CHARGE OF THEFT.

Walter Rosewarne, Leslie Rosewarne, and Joseph Conroy were arraigned on a charge of having, at Newtown, stolen a quantity of goods, including a marriage certificate, a title deed in respect of land, and money to the amount of £46, the property of Elizabeth Kelly. The accused, Walter Rosewarne, pleaded guilty, and the two accused, Leslie Rosewarne and Joseph Conroy, who pleaded not guilty, were each convicted. Walter Rosewarne was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol. If the property or any of it be restored a remission of a portion of the sentence will be recommended. Leslie Rosewarne and Joseph Conroy were each bound over in his own recognisance in a sum of £40, to appear and receive sentence if called upon within twelve months.

Ernest Sturley Morrison was found guilty on three counts of stealing. He was bound over in his own recognisance with one surety in £40 each to appear and receive sentence if called upon within twelve months. Mr. Fanker represented the accused.

Bert Firkin and Albert Landow were each arraigned on charges of having, on August 25, stolen an electric motor, the property of Chapman and Company, Ltd., and also with having received the electric motor well knowing the same to have been stolen. A verdict of not guilty was returned in each case, and the two accused were thereupon discharged. Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared for the accused.

Gordon Lindsay Farquharson pleaded guilty to having, on October 16, stolen certain articles, the property of Mabel Alice Newling Ward. Farquharson also pleaded guilty to having, on October 13, at Summer Hill, in the dwelling-house of Alfred Thomas Hinds, stolen a ring and pendant. Accused further pleaded guilty to having, on September 17, at Paddington, stolen a bangle, the property of Elizabeth Willis. He was remanded for sentence.

PREJUDICIAL TO RECRUITING.

Norah Hayes, a married woman, appeared before Mr. M'Kensey, at the Central Police Court, yesterday, to answer a charge of having made statements on October 20 likely to prejudice the recruiting of his Majesty's forces.

Frederick Grosvenor, in giving evidence, stated that he heard defendant say during an altercation in Queen-street, Chippendale, between her and another woman, that her brother was a deserter from the Boer war, and that if she thought he would fight for the English she would get a revolver and shoot him. She added that she was a Sinn Feiner, and was glad of the fact. Defendant afterwards came round to the back of his premises and abused his wife.

Defendant, who denied having made use of the words, was fined £10, in default two months' imprisonment with hard labour. She was also ordered to enter into a recognisance in £50 to comply with the provisions of regulation 28 of the War Precautions Act, the alternative being two months' imprisonment with hard labour.

VETERAN POLICE INSPECTOR.

There passed away at Mosman recently one of the State's oldest public servants in the person of Inspector Daniel Byrne. Deceased was born in 1836, and joined the police force in 1862—fifty-five years ago. He had a long and varied experience in tracking down the numerous bands of outlaws who defied the authorities and plundered their unfortunate victims. He took a prominent part in the capture of the Clarke brothers and their followers, who "stuck up" the gold escort near Jugiong, and was also instrumental in running to earth Ben Hall and his gang. Hall being shot dead by Sub-inspector Davidson near the Billabong River after being proclaimed an outlaw. In 1866 the late police officer arrested Thomas Connell, the bushranger, after a sharp encounter, near Balabah.

Inspector Byrne was successively stationed at Cooma, Bombala, and Young, and retired from the service in 1902 on a pension.

Sylvia and the big dog came into the room at the moment, and having made final arrangements for her visit to the Meadow House, John took his ward away, leaving behind him a girl whose heart was deeply stirred and puzzled.

"Poor man, oh, poor man," was her thought after the doctor and his ward had left her, "some woman must have been horrible to him, or he would never feel so dreadful about women as he does. And I believe the woman was Mrs. Danvers. The day her husband died here, when she lifted her head and looked at him, Dr. Camberley stared at her as if she was a ghost, and a ghost he had never expected to see again. And she told me how much she would like to take a house near here, so as to be within reach of him, as he was a very old friend. I wish I knew the truth about it all, and I should like to comfort him—oh, I should like to comfort him. Only I shall try never to see him even if he brings Sylvia again, because he must never think—never, never think that I am the sort of woman who would try to buy his friendship by being good to his ward."

After that first visit John did not go back to the Meadow House, but Sylvia's visits became a regular institution, and under Eva's guidance she learnt much that neither her two men friends nor Mrs. Day could teach her. But John never again acted as her escort. He trusted Eva with the child, but he did not wish to see the girl for herself.

It was on one morning in September that Sylvia burst into Eva's little sitting-room with eyes alight, and a flushed, smiling face.

"Something beautiful has happened, something just lovely," she said. "Mr. John's got two patients, isn't it grand? And he says the world must be coming to an end, but, of course, he's ever so pleased inside him, though he doesn't say much outside. The rector's got a bad cold, and he sent for Mr. John last night; and this morning Mr. John was sent for to go and see a friend of the rector's who's stopping at the hotel. And I believe it all came out of our splendid secret, the rector's and mine. It's our surprise for Mr. John, and it did surprise him. Only he doesn't know about its being us, because it's our secret still. Only isn't it beautiful? It makes me happy right through me because I know he is glad."

CHAPTER XII.

NO. 10, THE LANE.

Alicia Henderson lived at No. 10, The Lane, one of those tiny cottages which lay at the back of John Camberley's house in the lane that ran down towards the meadows. She was a grim old woman, well past middle life, and she looked with grim eyes and unsmiling face at the little girl who stood at her door one gusty October day. The wind that was sweeping the yellow leaves, and rustling and whirling them along the lane, blew Sylvia's dusky hair like a soft cloud across her face, and whipped the colour into her cheeks; and she laughed her gay little laugh as an extra boisterous blast twisted her skirts round her black-stockinged legs, and almost wrenched her hat from her head.

"Isn't it blowy?" she said, looking into Alicia's eyes with her friendly glance, that glance which always seemed to expect equal friendliness in return. "Please I've come to say there's going to be an awfully nice concert in the school to-night, and will you come?"

"Me go to a concert? Not likely." The woman in the doorway laughed harshly. "I haven't time to be playing about at concerts, whatever other people may do."

"The rector says lots of the other people are coming," Sylvia said with unconscious literalness, "and I do wish you could come too. He said I was specially to ask the friends I wanted, and I thought of you."

"You wouldn't call me one of your special friends, I suppose, would you?" Alicia asked, a curious look in her eyes as they fixed themselves intently upon the child.

"Oh, yes, I should." Sylvia answered without a second of hesitation. "Why, we've talked a lot in the churchyard, and once you let me come inside your house—the time I brought you back your kitten." The grim lines of the woman's face relaxed a little, something which bore a distant relationship to a smile hovered over it.

"Well, there's no denying you've talked to me in the churchyard," she said, not very graciously. "I don't know what to goodness makes me go and sit there, excepting that my legs won't let me get far, and I seem to fancy getting out now and then in the sunshine."

"And it's lovely and sunny in the churchyard, isn't it?" Sylvia exclaimed eagerly, "and old Daddy Johnson says that when February comes all the grass is white with snowdrops. When I first came there were daffodils under the grey old wall—and violets, lots of violets."

"Oh, there's violets in the churchyard, plenty of 'em," Alicia said gruffly.

"And roses," Sylvia's eager voice broke in; "don't you like the crimson ones all over the porch, and the bushes that smell so sweet?—the ones that are planted amongst the graves. I think the churchyard is a very lovely place." The grim woman looked down at the child's dreamy face, curiosity expressed on her own.

"You ain't got any gloomy thoughts about dead folks?" she questioned abruptly; "you ain't afraid of churchyards?"

"Afraid?" Sylvia looked genuinely puzzled; fear played no part in her sane and wholesome nature. "What would I be afraid about? And I shouldn't think one need have any gloomy thoughts about dead people. They're still alive really, you see—somewhere else, they're still alive really. Mr. Symonds says the churchyard just makes us remember that death is the gate to life, and I love it, it's so sunny, and so glad."

"You're the first person I ever heard call a churchyard glad," Alicia Henderson said with a repetition of her harsh laugh; "but there, you're a queer little piece altogether."

"That's what Mrs. Day says. She says I'm a queer little piece, but I don't know what she means. I'm not queerer than other little girls, am I?" A little questioning frown puckered her forhead; she looked anxiously into the grim woman's small, rather closely set eyes.

"Don't you worry yourself about that." Again came the odd, unaccustomed smile which had seemed so foreign to Alicia's face. "You've got ideas of your own, that's all—ideas you've learnt from the Rector, I daresay. And I'll be bound you don't half understand all he says to you."

"I don't understand it quite all," Sylvia said simply, "but I think I'll understand it when I get bigger. And my own Daddy gave me ideas, too, and so does Mr. John." A sudden scowl wiped the transitory smile from Alicia's face. It would seem as though it had been brought there by the mention of John's name. "Well, I can't stand chattering here," she said almost roughly; "I've got things to see to indoors."

"I'm dreadfully sorry you can't come to the concert," Sylvia answered. "Mrs. Day's coming, but Mr. John can't."

"He wouldn't be likely to," Miss Henderson responded with something like a sneer; "he doesn't care much for company, does he?"

"No—he doesn't." Sylvia shook her head sadly, and the wind rioting up the lane again tossed her soft hair into fresh confusion. "I'm afraid he isn't very sociable. You see, he's got rather used to being alone, and so he doesn't care to go out much. But I'm going—for a great treat, because Mr. Symonds begged that I should, and I think it will be lovely. I haven't ever been to a concert before, you see," she ended, with a little gasp of joyful anticipation. "And, please, is the kitten all right?" she added, after a pause.

"The kitten's well enough." Alicia Henderson responded somewhat curtly; then—either because of a shadow of disappointment she saw in Sylvia's eyes, or because there flashed back into her mind the remembrance of the day some weeks back when the child had rescued the kitten from rough lads who were proposing to drown it—she said grudgingly: "You can come in and see it if you like."

Sylvia's eyes shone as she walked on tiptoe into the cottage, almost as if she were visiting some inviolable sanctuary, which indeed it was in Alicia Henderson's eyes. She was one of those sour women who glory in "keeping themselves to themselves," to use their own favourite phrase; a phrase which indeed represents to them a sacred shibboleth; and visitors never crossed her threshold, or entered that holy of holies, her best parlour. It was a stuffy little apartment, its window was evidently only opened on occasions so rare as to be almost entirely negligible, and such light as could filter through the small panes was considerably obstructed by the geraniums which blocked up a very large part of the windowsill. The room was almost entirely full of furniture, and to move about it at all involved squeezing yourself with difficulty between tables, chairs, and a couch covered with a wonderful crochet coverlet. A bright red cloth was spread over the table, and upon this were a few large and ornately bound books, arranged symmetrically about a vase, holding strangely coloured grasses. The mantelpiece was crowded with ornaments of a most ordinary description, but nothing in the whole apartment suggested either home or comfort, and Sylvia looked round it with an involuntary sigh.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

STRIKE PROSECUTIONS.

JURY LOCKED UP FOR THE NIGHT.

The trial of Edward John Kavanagh, Claude Thompson, Albert Charles Willis, and Arthur William Buckley for alleged conspiracy in connection with the recent strike in Sydney was continued in the Criminal Court, before his Honor Mr. Justice Pring at Darlinghurst yesterday. Mr. Blacket, K.C., and Mr. Broomfield (instructed by Mr. Bathgate, of the Crown Law Office) appeared to prosecute. Mr. Windeyer, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.), appeared for Willis; Mr. Gannon, K.C., and Mr. Collins (instructed by Mr. McMahon) appeared for Buckley; Mr. Watt and Mr. V. McGhie (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.) for Kavanagh; and Mr. Sheridan (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.) for Thompson.

The indictment reads:—

(1) For that they on July 26, 1917, and on divers others days thereafter, at Sydney, did among themselves and with Dan Clyne, John Kearney, and divers other persons whose names to the Attorney-General are unknown, unlawfully and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to instigate certain persons employed in the service of the Railway Commissioners for New South Wales to do an act in the nature of a strike.

(2) Further, that the accused on July 26, and on divers other days thereafter, did, among themselves and with Dan Clyne, John Kearney, and divers other persons whose names are unknown, unlawfully and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to counsel, procure, incite, and command divers persons being employees of the Railway Commissioners for New South Wales unlawfully to break their contracts of service as such employees as aforesaid.

(3) Further, that they, on July 26 and on divers other days thereafter, at Sydney, did, among themselves and with Dan Clyne, John Kearney, and divers other persons whose names are unknown, unlawfully and wickedly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to prevent the Railway Commissioners of New South Wales from carrying on the railway and tramway services of the State, and from exercising and performing their duties on this behalf.

Mr. Windeyer asked his Honor to direct the jury that the minutes of the Defence Committee's meetings were not evidence against all the accused.

His Honor said he intended to direct the jury that the minutes were evidence against Kavanagh only.

Mr. Windeyer contended that the Crown case had failed. There was not the slightest evidence of conspiracy against any of the accused. What was the strike the Crown relied on? Was it the strike of August 2 or a later strike? Willis did not appear on the scene until well on in August. If it was a later strike what was that strike? These men left their employment on August 2 as a protest against the introduction of the card system. It had been established that, after a certain date, these men were no longer employees of the Railway Commissioner. Surely, if a man or a body of men did not care for the conditions under which they worked they had a right to protest. Had it been shown that any one of the accused had devised the strike? Was it not proved that they all came in after the hotheads of unionism had commenced the strike. Why were these hotheads not standing their trial, instead of the accused? These hotheads reported they were against the card system, and said to the council, "We are going to strike." These men in the dock had endeavoured to bring about a settlement. Their every effort was towards promoting a settlement. It was known that Willis advocated the taking of a ballot. Willis specially attended the council to advocate the ballot. Yet he was one of the men picked on to stand his trial for conspiracy. Why? Because he was an intelligent man, because some of them considered him a dangerous man to the community. Was he? He contended they would have no difficulty in finding Willis not guilty. There were only two pieces of evidence against Willis. One, that he armed himself with a permit to travel on the railways. The Crown relied on this to show Willis brought about the strike. One wondered why the Crown persisted in the case against Willis. The only other evidence was that Willis spoke in the Domain. Was there one word proved from those speeches that Willis showed a determination to bring the men out?

Mr. Blacket said Kavanagh possibly saw that this strike was doomed to failure from the outset. Had he withdrawn then there would have been no charge against him. But it was clearly proved that right from the outset he aided the men, and determined to do all in his power to bring the men out, and so prevent the Railway Commissioners from carrying on the railway and tramway services of the country. There was an extraordinary conflict between the evidence and the statement of Kavanagh. It was apparent Kavanagh was a great leader of the men, and that the men gave weight to his views. They were told of his activities in other strikes in settling them. But look at the weight that would be given to the fact of the presence of the Hon. E. J. Kavanagh, M.L.C., at the head of affairs. Yet he told them he was only a paid servant. Kavanagh, as secretary was entrusted with the drafting of the ultimatum in such terms as he thought fit. There they found him working actively in the interests of the committee. He was in favour of their purpose, and assisted in every direction to carry out their desires. Kavanagh was the official mouthpiece of the committee, and was the only man who was to give information to the press. Buckley had written to the Defence Committee advising certain action. On August 8 Buckley knew of the illegal purpose of the committee, and yet advised them to continue their illegal acts. With regard to Willis, his speeches in the Domain formed the substance of the charge against him. But he (Mr. Blacket) wanted to impress the jury with the fact, firstly, that Willis in those speeches put himself forward as a leader of the strikers; and, secondly, that Willis put himself forward as a man who had assisted the committee to do what had been done up to that time. As to Thompson, it seemed strange that he, as secretary of the association, should be unaware of what was happening until all the men were out on August 2. His telegrams of August 3, "All loco. men cease work forthwith," were sufficient. The man who was directly responsible for ordering out these loco. men was Thompson, who, up till August 12, was working busily to get the men out, and keep them out. They also had in evidence the fact that Thompson gave Cline instructions to foment the strike in Queensland.

JUDGE'S SUMMING UP.

His Honor, in summing up, said they were rightly told the Crown must make out its case beyond reasonable doubt. It was said—and rightly so—that this was a case of circumstantial evidence. In conspiracy they seldom had anything else. When persons conspired they did not allow their communications to be known. In considering circumstantial evidence the circumstances must point to the guilt of the accused, and must not be consistent with any other reasonable or rational conclusion. Conspiracy was an agreement or combination between two or more persons to do some illegal act. He wanted them to take these men separately, see what they had done, what they had said, and what they had written. Look in what direction this pointed. For what purposes were these things done? Why did they write or why did they speak? Consider if what they did was with one purpose in view. Then consider whether, beyond reasonable doubt, they acted together. What one man said or did was not evidence against the others, unless they were satisfied the men were acting together. The minutes were not evidence against any of the accused except Kavanagh. They did not know whether what was written down in the minute-books was correct. They had no evidence that the men mentioned as being present at the meetings were present. As to Thompson, a large number of telegrams were put in. They were not evidence against the other accused. After defining a strike, his Honor said there was no doubt that the men ceased work with a view to compelling the Commissioner to accede to their demands on the question of the introduction of the card system. It had been argued that the introduction of the card system did not mean a change in the working conditions. His view was that the introduction of the card system was a change in the conditions. Conspiracy was a hard thing to prove, and if there was a reasonable doubt the accused must be given the benefit of it.

Mr. Windeyer urged his Honor to direct the jury that the urging of men who were out to remain out on strike was not an overt act under any count. Further, that the urging of the men to stay out was no evidence of prior concert to bring the men out.

His Honor declined to do so.

The foreman of the jury asked if persons other than the accused brought about the strike or conspired to bring about the strike, and, after having done so, went and saw the accused or each of them, and told them to bring out other men, would it be regarded as conspiracy.

His Honor said he did not think that would amount to an agreement or combination.

The foreman: Supposing the accused persons did not conspire, but after the men were on strike these men then did prevent or attempt to prevent the railways and tramways being conducted, how would it be regarded?

His Honor said in that event the accused would come under the third count.

The foreman: But, supposing there was no agreement in the first place?

His Honor: There must be an agreement, combination, or concert.

The jury retired at 3.12 p.m. to consider their verdict.

JURY ASKS FOR DIRECTIONS.

At 5.45 p.m. the jury returned into court to ask for directions.

The foreman: The strike having taken place, can there be conspiracy under any one of the three counts by helping to continue that strike?

His Honor: Under the third count that is conspiracy to prevent the Railway Commissioner carrying on the railway services.

The foreman: Then we take it, if we find under the first and second count—I do not want to anticipate the verdict of the jury—that there had been no conspiracy beforehand or at any time by the accused to bring about the strike, can we say, relying on your ruling regarding the third count, that they are guilty of conspiracy by helping to continue the strike?

His Honor: Provided they agreed together.

The foreman: Even though they took no part to bring about the strike?

His Honor: I think so. I forgot to mention the evidence of character in my summing up. You are entitled to take into consideration, if you have a doubt as to their guilt, their previous good character. It may weigh down in their favour.

The foreman: Does that mean that if we find on the third count that they conspired to carry on the strike, then we take into consideration, and give them the benefit of, their particular dealings in other strikes, and that this must outweigh their guilt?

His Honor: No. If you come to the conclusion that they are guilty their character will be of no avail to you. But if you have a doubt as to their guilt, then you will take into consideration their previous good character, and it may weigh in their favour.

The jury again retired at 6.5 p.m.

JURY LOCKED UP.

At 9.5 p.m. the jury returned to court, and, in answer to his Honor, said they had agreed on the first and second counts, but not on the third. Would his Honor accept their verdict on the first two counts?

His Honor: No.

CHARGE AGAINST OWENS.

Frank Owens, secretary of the New South Wales branch of the Federated Liquor Trades, was charged with having, on August 14, and on other days thereafter, at Sydney, conspired, combined, confederated, and agreed with Travers Frost, and with divers other persons whose names were unknown, to instigate certain persons in the employ of Schweppe's, Ltd., to do an act in the nature of a strike. He was further charged with having conspired, combined, confederated, and agreed with Travers Frost, and divers other persons whose names were unknown, to prejudice and impoverish a certain company, to wit, Schweppe's, Ltd., and to prevent and hinder the said company from carrying on its trade and business in the manufacture and supply of mineral waters and cordials.

Mr. Windeyer, K.C., and Mr. Watt (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.) appeared for the accused. Mr. Broomfield (instructed by Mr. Bathgate of the Crown Law Office), appeared for the Crown.

Upon the indictment being read, and before the accused had pleaded, Mr. Windeyer, took the point that he desired to preserve his rights, under section 293 of the Crimes Act. The prosecution alleged substantially different conspiracies, and must elect to proceed on a definite count. The Crown could arraign accused afresh. Before the accused pleaded he asked for particulars.

Mr. Broomfield said the particulars were contained in the depositions. They would not go outside of those matters in the depositions. As to Mr. Windeyer's contention, he would not object to the preservation of their rights.

Mr. Windeyer said that so long as their rights were preserved he would not go on with the point. But he must ask for better particulars than were contained in the depositions. They had been considerably hampered by the lack of particulars of the alleged conspiracy.

His Honor said the accused would have to plead.

Accused pleaded not guilty. He was remanded to come up for trial when called on. Mr. Broomfield explained that the principal witness, Mr. Paul, was in a hospital. Accused was allowed bail, himself in £200, and one surety of £200.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly, Mr. Justice Gordon, and Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

THE NARROMINE TRAGEDY.

The King v Meizer.

Mr. Shand, K.C., and Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by Mr. L. G. B. Cadden (agent for Messrs. M'Guinn and M'Guinn, of Dubbo), appeared for John Ernest Moss Meizer, in support of an appeal against his conviction and sentence; and Mr. C. A. White, instructed by the Crown Solicitor (Mr. J. V. Tillett), to oppose. The prisoner was convicted at the Assize Court, Dubbo, before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 12, in October last, of the murder of Zena Audrey Hill, a child of five years, whose body was found in a chaff shed at Narromine. He was sentenced to death, and now appealed mainly on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, and unreasonable. There were also other grounds relating to the admission of evidence, and certain points in his Honor's summing up. It was admitted, however, that Mr. Justice Pring, in summing up to the jury, properly told them that the evidence being circumstantial must be such as to exclude every other reasonable hypothesis than that of the guilt of the accused: but it was contended by Mr. Shand that the evidence was open to another reasonable hypothesis, and prisoner should therefore have been acquitted.

The Court, upon the conclusion of argument, reserved judgment.

Shearon, of Phillip-street, Sydney, photographic artist. The plaintiff claimed £150 in connection with a diamond ring, and £30 for its alleged detention, by the defendant. The latter denied detention, and alleged that the ring in dispute was not the property of the plaintiff.

The case is part heard.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and juries.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

MALICIOUSLY WOUNDING.

Henry John Elliott Swanborough, who was convicted on two counts, one of having, at Redfern, on September 26, maliciously wounded Frederick Hanson with intent to do grievous bodily harm; and the other with having maliciously wounded Frederick Hanson with intent to prevent the lawful apprehension of one, Melross, was brought up for sentence. He was sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol for twelve months on each count, sentences to be concurrent. Mr. Hogarth appeared for the accused.

CHARGE OF THEFT.

Walter Rosewarne, Leslie Rosewarne, and Joseph Conroy were arraigned on a charge of having, at Newtown, stolen a quantity of goods, including a marriage certificate, a title deed in respect of land, and money to the amount of £46, the property of Elizabeth Kelly. The accused, Walter Rosewarne, pleaded guilty, and the two accused, Leslie Rosewarne and Joseph Conroy, who pleaded not guilty, were each convicted. Walter Rosewarne was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol. If the property or any of it be restored a remission of a portion of the sentence will be recommended. Leslie Rosewarne and Joseph Conroy were each bound over in his own recognisance in a sum of £40, to appear and receive sentence if called upon within twelve months.

Ernest Sturley Morrison was found guilty on three counts of stealing. He was bound over in his own recognisance with one surety in £40 each to appear and receive sentence if called upon within twelve months. Mr. Funker represented the accused.

Bert Firkin and Albert Landow were each arraigned on charges of having, on August 29, stolen an electric motor, the property of Chapman and Company, Ltd., and also with having received the electric motor well knowing the same to have been stolen. A verdict of not guilty was returned in each case, and the two accused were thereupon discharged. Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared for the accused.

Gordon Lindsay Farquharson pleaded guilty to having, on October 16, stolen certain articles, the property of Mabel Alice Newling Ward. Farquharson also pleaded guilty to having, on October 12, at Summer Hill, in the dwelling-house of Alfred Thomas Hinds, stolen a ring and pendant. Accused further pleaded guilty to having, on September 17, at Paddington, stolen a bangle, the property of Elizabeth Willis. He was remanded for sentence.

PREJUDICIAL TO RECRUITING.

Norah Hayes, a married woman, appeared before Mr. M'Kensey, at the Central Police Court, yesterday, to answer a charge of having made statements on October 20 likely to prejudice the recruiting of his Majesty's forces.

Frederick Grosvenor, in giving evidence, stated that he heard defendant say during an altercation in Queen-street, Chippendale, between her and another woman, that her brother was a deserter from the Boer war, and that if she thought he would fight for the English she would get a revolver and shoot him. She added that she was a Sinn Feiner, and was glad of the fact. Defendant afterwards came round to the back of his premises and abused his wife.

Defendant, who denied having made use of the words, was fined £10, in default two months' imprisonment with hard labour. She was also ordered to enter into a recognisance in £50 to comply with the provisions of regulation 28 of the War Precautions Act, the alternative being two months' imprisonment with hard labour.

VETERAN POLICE INSPECTOR.

There passed away at Mosman recently one of the State's oldest public servants in the person of Inspector Daniel Byrne. Deceased was born in 1836, and joined the police force in 1862—fifty-five years ago. He had a long and varied experience in tracking down the numerous bands of outlaws who defied the authorities and plundered their unfortunate victims. He took a prominent part in the capture of the Clarke brothers and their followers, who "stuck up" the gold escort near Jugiong, and was also instrumental in running to earth Ben Hall and his gang, Hall being shot dead by Sub-inspector Davidson near the Billabong River after being proclaimed an outlaw. In 1866 the late police officer arrested Thomas Connell, the bushranger, after a sharp encounter, near Ballalaba.

Sylvia and the big dog came into the room at the moment, and having made final arrangements for her visit to the Meadow House, John took his ward away, leaving behind him a girl whose heart was deeply stirred and puzzled.

"Poor man, oh, poor man," was her thought after the doctor and his ward had left her, "some woman must have been horrible to him, or he would never feel so dreadful about women as he does. And I believe the woman was Mrs. Danvers. The day her husband died here, when she lifted her head and looked at him, Dr. Camberley stared at her as if she was a ghost, and a ghost he had never expected to see again. And she told me how much she would like to take a house near here, so as to be within reach of him, as he was a very old friend. I wish I knew the truth about it all, and I should like to comfort him—oh, I should like to comfort him. Only I shall try never to see him even if he brings Sylvia again, because he must never think—never, never think that I am the sort of woman who would try to buy his friendship by being good to his ward."

After that first visit John did not go back to the Meadow House, but Sylvia's visits became a regular institution, and under Eva's guidance she learnt much that neither her two men friends nor Mrs. Day could teach her. But John never again acted as her escort. He trusted Eva with the child, but he did not wish to see the girl for herself.

It was on one morning in September that Sylvia burst into Eva's little sitting-room with eyes alight, and a flushed, smiling face.

"Something beautiful has happened; something just lovely," she said. "Mr. John's got two patients, isn't it grand? And he says the world must be coming to an end, but, of course, he's ever so pleased inside him, though he doesn't say much outside. The rector's got a bad cold, and he sent for Mr. John last night; and this morning Mr. John was sent for to go and see a friend of the rector's who's stopping at the hotel. And I belive it all came out of our splendid secret, the rector's and mine. It's our surprise for Mr. John, and it did surprise him. Only he doesn't know about its being us, because it's our secret still. Only isn't it beautiful? It makes me happy right through me because I know he is glad."

CHAPTER XII.

NO. 10, THE LANE.

Alicia Henderson lived at No. 10, The Lane, one of those tiny cottages which lay at the back of John Camberley's house in the lane that ran down towards the meadows. She was a grim old woman, well past middle life, and she looked with grim eyes and unsmiling face at the little girl who stood at her door one gusty October day. The wind that was sweeping the yellow leaves, and rustling and whirling them along the lane, blew Sylvia's dusky hair like a soft cloud across her face, and whipped the colour into her cheeks; and she laughed her gay little laugh as an extra boisterous blast twisted her skirts round her black-stockinged legs, and almost wrenched her hat from her head.

"Isn't it blowy?" she said, looking into Alicia's eyes with her friendly glance, that glance which always seemed to expect equal friendliness in return. "Please I've come to say there's going to be an awfully nice concert in the school to-night, and will you come?"

"Me go to a concert? Not likely." The woman in the doorway laughed harshly. "I haven't time to be playing about at concerts, whatever other people may do."

"The rector says lots of the other people are coming," Sylvia said with unconscious literalness, "and I do wish you could come too. He said I was specially to ask the friends I wanted, and I thought of you."

"You wouldn't call me one of your special friends, I suppose, would you?" Alicia asked, a curious look in her eyes as they fixed themselves intently upon the child.

"Oh, yes, I should," Sylvia answered without a second of hesitation. "Why, we've talked a lot in the churchyard, and once you let me come inside your house—the time I brought you back your kitten." The grim lines of the woman's face relaxed a little, something which bore a distant relationship to a smile hovered over it.

"Well, there's no denying you've talked to me in the churchyard," she said, not very graciously. "I don't know what to goodness makes me go and sit there, excepting that my legs won't let me get far, and I seem to fancy getting out now and then in the sunshine."

"And it's lovely and sunny in the churchyard, isn't it?" Sylvia exclaimed eagerly, "and old Daddy Johnson says that when February comes all the grass is white with snowdrops. When I first came there were daffodils under the grey old wall—and violets, lots of violets."

"Oh, there's violets in the churchyard, plenty of 'em," Alicia said gruffly.

"And roses," Sylvia's eager voice broke in; "don't you like the crimson ones all over the porch, and the bushes that smell so sweet?—the ones that are planted amongst the graves. I think the churchyard is a very lovely place." The grim woman looked down at the child's dreamy face, curiosity expressed on her own.

"You ain't got any gloomy thoughts about dead folks?" she questioned abruptly; "you ain't afraid of churchyards?"

"Afraid?" Sylvia looked genuinely puzzled; fear played no part in her sane and wholesome nature. "What would I be afraid about? And I shouldn't think one need have any gloomy thoughts about dead people. They're still alive really, you see—somewhere else, they're still alive really. Mr. Symonds says the churchyard just makes us remember that death is the gate to life, and I love it, it's so sunny, and so glad."

"You're the first person I ever heard call a churchyard glad," Alicia Henderson said with a repetition of her harsh laugh; "but there, you're a queer little piece altogether."

"That's what Mrs. Day says. She says I'm a queer little piece, but I don't know what she means. I'm not queerer than other little girls, am I?" A little questioning frown puckered her forhead: she looked anxiously into the grim woman's small, rather closely set eyes.

"Don't you worry yourself about that." Again came the odd, unaccustomed smile which had seemed so foreign to Alicia's face. "You've got ideas of your own, that's all—ideas you've learnt from the Rector, I daresay. And I'll be bound you don't half understand all he says to you."

"I don't understand it quite all," Sylvia said simply, "but I think I'll understand it when I get bigger. And my own Daddy gave me ideas, too, and so does Mr. John." A sudden scowl wiped the transitory smile from Alicia's face. It would seem as though it had been brought there by the mention of John's name. "Well, I can't stand chattering here," she said almost roughly; "I've got things to see to indoors."

"I'm dreadfully sorry you can't come to the concert," Sylvia answered. "Mrs. Day's coming, but Mr. John can't."

"He wouldn't be likely to," Miss Henderson responded with something like a sneer; "he doesn't care much for company, does he?"

"No—he doesn't." Sylvia shook her head sadly, and the wind rioting up the lane again tossed her soft hair into fresh confusion. "I'm afraid he isn't very sociable. You see, he's got rather used to being alone, and so he doesn't care to go out much. But I'm going—for a great treat, because Mr. Symonds begged that I should, and I think it will be lovely. I haven't ever been to a concert before, you see," she ended, with a little gasp of joyful anticipation. "And, please, is the kitten all right?" she added, after a pause.

"The kitten's well enough," Alicia Henderson responded somewhat curtly; then—either because of a shadow of disappointment she saw in Sylvia's eyes, or because there flashed back into her mind the remembrance of the day some weeks back when the child had rescued the kitten from rough lads who were proposing to drown it—she said grudgingly: "You can come in and see it if you like."

Sylvia's eyes shone as she walked on tiptoe into the cottage, almost as if she were visiting some inviolable sanctuary, which indeed it was in Alicia Henderson's eyes. She was one of those sour women who glory in "keeping themselves to themselves," to use their own favourite phrase; a phrase which indeed represents to them a sacred shibboleth; and visitors never crossed her threshold, or entered that holy of holies, her best parlour. It was a stuffy little apartment, its window was evidently only opened on occasions so rare as to be almost entirely negligible, and such light as could filter through the small panes was considerably obstructed by the geraniums which blocked up a very large part of the windowsill. The room was almost entirely full of furniture, and to move about it at all involved squeezing yourself with difficulty between tables, chairs, and a couch covered with a wonderful crochet coverlet. A bright red cloth was spread over the table, and upon this were a few large and ornately bound books, arranged symmetrically about a vase, holding strangely coloured grasses. The mantelpiece was crowded with ornaments of a most ordinary description, but nothing in the whole apartment suggested either home or comfort, and Sylvia looked round it with an involuntary sigh.

ON THE LAND.

WASHINGTON NAVELS.

Mr. S. J. Black, of Lisarow, who is probably the largest grower of Washington Navels in the Gosford district, regards this fruit as eminently suited to his district. The results obtained from the first planting of trees some years ago were so favourable that he has continued to increase this crop, until now he has about seven hundred trees, many of them only recently planted. Referring to the difficulties regarding this class of orange, which have been the experience of many growers, Mr. Black holds the opinion that success depends primarily upon the selection of the real Washington Navel. His original trees were worked from imported wood, and since then he has been able to bud from his own trees. In Mr. Black's opinion, the grower who puts out trees without having certain knowledge of their origin is looking for trouble, and there is evidence of this fact that quite a number of supposed Washington Navels have been dug out and replaced by other varieties. Again, in regard to position, Mr. Black's experience goes to show that they thrive on the slopes as well as on the lower ground, as he has, for experimental purposes, planted a number on the hillsides. There is but little difference in the returns from the trees in these respective positions. In regard to manures, he treats his navels the same as the Valencias and other oranges, using a liberal dressing of blood and bone in the winter time. Thorough cultivation is, too, regarded as essential. This grower has sent away both to Sydney and Melbourne about a thousand cases of navels this season, which averaged about 14/ per case, the range of prices being from 10/ to 20/. The returns would have even been better but for the strike.

THE WHEAT DEAL.

That the Australian farmer was not fairly treated in the sale of his wheat to the Imperial Authorities is the opinion of Mr. R. B. Rees, M.L.C., who, speaking at Redipo recently, referred to statements made by Mr. Hazeltborn and Senator Russell that the cost of carriage of wheat from Australia to England absorbed the difference in the price between the London prices and what the farmers of Australia received. Their wheat was sold to the Imperial Government for 4s 9d per bushel, the price of that wheat selling in the London market, as fixed by the Food Controller in England, was 10s 6d per bushel, or 8s per quarter; and the Canadian and American Governments had sold the last season's wheat to the imperial authorities at 9s 2d per bushel. The chartering between Canadian and United States ports and Great Britain was free, and wheat was carried from Winnipeg or from Chicago, a distance of one thousand miles by land to the seaboard, and 3000 miles by water to Great Britain for the difference between 9s 2d per bushel and 10s 6d per bushel, namely 1s 4d per bushel. That, he pointed out, meant 1000 miles of land carriage and 3000 of sea, for 1s 4d per bushel. Australia had closed the wheat market to Great Britain for freights, and owing to Mr. Hughes purchasing the ships and starting the Commonwealth line, no shippers from Great Britain would send ships out here under any circumstances. If they could help it, consequently the Government of Australia, jointly with the Imperial Government, were charging the difference between 4s 9d a bushel and 10s 6d a bushel in the carriage of wheat from Australia to England. The huge monopoly created by the two Governments in the shipping had boosted up the price of the carriage on wheat higher almost than on an other commodity including frozen meat, on which the carriage was only one penny and a fraction per lb. In order to help Mr. Hughes's purchase of ships and make a fine show when the returns were demanded in the Federal Parliament, the whole business was tied up so far as the carriage of wheat was concerned. The wheat authorities in Australia had sold our wheat at at least 2s per bushel too cheaply if there were a fair deal by the two Governments in the carriage of our wheat from here to England. A similar attempt was made by the Canadian Grain Commission last year. When he was in Winnipeg, in September of last year, wheat was selling at 11s 3d per bushel, which price was realised by the Canadian grower, and the imperial authorities offered them a ridiculously low price for their wheat. The Canadian farmers refused the offer, saying they would stick to the American market, and consequently they were placed on the same footing as the American grower, and were paid the same price as the latter, who were receiving vastly more for their wheat. The Canadians thus received for their wheat nearly double that was given the Australian farmer.

NEW SEASON'S WHEAT.

The Minister for Agriculture (Mr. Grahame) stated yesterday that no new season's wheat can be received at country railway stations at present. It had been the intention of the State Wheat Office to remove a large quantity of wheat from congested country stations, so that arrangements might be made for having the sites properly cleaned and disinfected in readiness for the new season's wheat, but the strike of the men at Goulburn and the railway strike had put matters back for over two months, and had thus made it practically impossible to have the wheat removed from the country. Arrangements are in progress with the Railway Department for new sites, and matters are being pushed forward rapidly with a view to their being in readiness in the immediate future, but in the meantime farmers should note that they should not rush to the railway the few bags of early wheat. This refers particularly to the northern districts.

A notification will be made in the Press when the sites are in readiness and wheat may be delivered.

JAPANESE HORSES AND CATTLE.

The Premier has received an interesting report from the Commercial Commissioner in the East respecting a horse and cattle show which he attended at Shizuoki, in Shimane Ken, on the west coast of Japan.

"Some years ago," writes Mr. Sutton, "Japanese live stock were of very inferior quality, but of late the improvement that has been made is remarkable, more especially by stock imported from Australia. Some of the exhibits would have attracted attention at the Royal Agricultural Show, Sydney, and at the present rate of progress I have every reason to believe that the Government will still further encourage the breeding of horses suitable for general purposes and cogs for dairying."

IRRIGATION AREAS.

OFFICIAL STATMENT.

The Minister for Agriculture yesterday referred to statements which have been made regarding alleged friction between the Irrigation Commission and the settlers on the Murrumbidgee irrigation areas, and that a deadlock had been reached between the settlers and the Minister for Agriculture as chairman of the Irrigation Commission, in connection with the compensation claims reported upon by Judge Bevan. Mr. Grahame states that both these statements are quite misleading, and are untrue in fact. He said: "Judge Bevan was appointed by the Cabinet to furnish a report to the Cabinet concerning the alleged failure of lucerne on certain farms, such farms representing a small percentage of the whole area now settled. The Cabinet, on receipt of the report, adopted some of the Judge's findings and modified others. Some of the settlers have accepted the reduced amount of compensation, but approximately 50 out of a total number of about 130 claimants on the irrigation areas have decided, with the advice of the Farmers' Union, not to accept the amounts offered. Anything that the Irrigation Commission has done in connection with this matter has been entirely in the way of carrying out definite decisions of the whole Cabinet, and it is quite incorrect to suggest that any deadlock or friction exists. If there is any deadlock it is between the Cabinet and the settlers, and not between the Irrigation Commission and the settlers.

"Recently I was present when the Acting Premier, as representing the Cabinet, received a deputation from the Farmers' Union executive and its solicitor concerning the unsettled claims, and heard all that these gentlemen desired to say. While on an official visit to the irrigation areas last week my colleagues of the Irrigation Commission extended an invitation to individual settlers concerned in the unsettled claims, and in reply to this invitation the settlers stated that they would meet the commission only if the invitation were extended to the executive of the Farmers' Union and its solicitor. Having already heard these latter gentlemen, and considered their arguments, there was, in my opinion, no need for the invitation to be extended, and the settlers concerned were so informed. They thereupon refused to meet the commissioners.

"There has been a deliberate attempt in some quarters to convey to the public the idea that there is general discontent on the irrigation areas. This is far from being the case. There are nearly 900 settlers at Yanco and Griffith, whereas the number affected by the unsettled compensation claims is in the vicinity of 50, and of that number it is

LATE MADAME CHARVIN.

The Premier, Mr. Holman, yesterday afternoon assisted in the last tribute to the late Madame Charvin, who was so well known in musical circles as Yvonne Leverrier. Covered with wreaths, and several of which the French colours were attached, the remains of the amiable and accomplished teacher-pianist rested prior to the funeral in the church of the Sacred Heart, Randwick. While the coffin was being carried from the church to the hearse, Miss Amlie Thiery played the Dead March. Commandant Armand Charvin, Mr. Frank Leverrier, K.C. (brother), Mr. H. Leverrier, and Mr. M. Leverrier (nephews), were the chief mourners. At the church, in addition to the members of the bereaved family, were M. Chayet (Consul-General for France), M. Marcus (Vice-Consul), Captain Lamy and the officers and crew of the Messageries Maritimes steamer Pacifique, M. A. Fombartaux (Messageries Maritimes), and Mr. James Ritchie (wharf manager, Messageries Maritimes). The State Conservatorium of Music was represented by Mr. Henri Verbrugghen (director), Mr. A Stanley Warwick (registrar), Mr Frank Hutchens (pianoforte), and Mr. Florent Hoogstoel (professor of violin).

Among those who followed the remains to the Waverley Cemetery were Sir William M'Millan, Lady M'Millan, Mr. Justice Edmunds, Professor Wilson (University of Sydney), Mr. R. G. L. Innes, K.C., Mr. T. ### IS THE CENSORSHIP SCIENTIFIC?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The remarks of the Honourable the Premier on Friday, reported in your Saturday's issue, raise important issues for the consideration of the people.

From the terms of Mr. Holman's remarks it is quite apparent that the censor has been exceedingly active, and that the people of this State, in common with our kindred of the Old Country, have been kept in absolute ignorance of matters which it is of the utmost importance should be communicated to them at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Holman speaks of disasters which have never been reported, and of which we are up to the present in absolute ignorance, unless, of course, one had the faculty of reading between the lines when it was apparent that there was a "screw loose" somewhere, and that things were not of the same roseate hue as the censor would have us believe.

The principal object of censorship is to prevent military secrets which may prove of advantage to the enemy being communicated. If the object of censorship is to conceal from the enemy the position of the Allies this argument must at once fall to the ground, for it is quite apparent that if a disaster, such as has been spoken of, has actually occurred, the enemy are in full possession of the details, and, therefore, there is nothing to hide from them.

If the object is to protect the reputations of politicians or officials, it seems to me the people should rise up and demand to know what it is their right to know, and to insist that censorship should not be allowed for such purposes.

The only other argument against a full disclosure is that a full knowledge of the position of affairs may possibly induce a panic. This risk may safely be taken, as otherwise there is nothing in the belief that the British Navy is "all right until its back has its back against the wall." If it is necessary, for goodness sake let every Briton have his back up against the wall, and bring out his best attributes. It is quite apparent that a great crime in keeping the people in ignorance of the facts is about to be committed. The people are asked to vote on the 20th proximo on a matter of the utmost importance to the whole of this Commonwealth. They are asked to vote on such information as it may please the censor, acting under the directions of the Federal Government, to disclose. In my opinion, the question to be decided on the 20th proximo is one which can only be intelligently voted upon if the true facts of the case are made known, and that in the absence of a full disclosure, forming an intelligent opinion as is allowed to leak out, which may or may not be correct, is a matter of practical impossibility.

I am one of those who believe in a full and complete disclosure, and shall be pleased to co-operate with any of my fellow-citizens having similar views, with the idea of at once forming a party, having for its objects the forcing of the Federal Government to remove the strict conditions of censorship. Trusting this will meet with a generous response,

I am, etc., PERCY W. BERNE.

ON THE LAND.

WASHINGTON NAVELS.

Mr. S. J. Black, of Lisarow, who is probably the largest grower of Washington Navels in the Gosford district, regards this fruit as eminently suited to his district. The results obtained from the first planting of trees some years ago were so favourable that he has continued to increase this crop, until now he has about seven hundred trees, many of them only recently planted. Referring to the difficulties regarding this class of orange, which have been the experience of many growers, Mr. Black holds the opinion that success depends primarily upon the selection of the real Washington Navel. His original trees were worked from imported wood, and since then he has been able to bud from his own trees. In Mr. Black's opinion, the grower who puts out trees without having certain knowledge of their origin is looking for trouble, and there is evidence of this fact that quite a number of supposed Washington Navels have been dug out and replaced by other varieties. Again, in regard to position, Mr. Black's experience goes to show that they thrive on the slopes as well as on the lower ground, as he has, for experimental purposes, planted a number on the hillsides. There is but little difference in the returns from the trees in these respective positions. In regard to manures, he treats his navels the same as the Valencias and other oranges, using a liberal dressing of blood and bone in the winter time. Thorough cultivation is, too, regarded as essential. This grower has sent away both to Sydney and Melbourne about a thousand cases of navels this season, which averaged about 14/ per case, the range of prices being from 10/ to 20/. The returns would have even been better but for the strike.

THE WHEAT DEAL.

That the Australian farmer was not fairly treated in the sale of his wheat to the Imperial authorities is the opinion of Mr. R. B. Rees, M.L.C., who, speaking at Bendigo recently, referred to statements made by Mr. Hagelthorn and Senator Russell that the cost of carriage of wheat from Australia to England absorbed the difference in the price between the London prices and what the farmers of Australia received. Their wheat was sold to the Imperial Government for 4s 9d per bushel; the price of that wheat selling in the London market, as fixed by the Food Controller in England, was 10s 6d per bushel, or 84s per quarter; and the Canadian and American Governments had sold the last season's wheat to the Imperial authorities at 9s 2d per bushel. The chartering between Canadian and United States ports and Great Britain was free, and wheat was carried from Winnipeg or from Chicago, a distance of one thousand miles by land to the seaboard, and 3000 miles by water to Great Britain for the difference between 9s 2d per bushel and 10s 6d per bushel, namely 1s 4d per bushel. That, he pointed out, meant 1000 miles of land carriage and 3000 of sea, for 1s 4d per bushel. Australia had closed the chartering market for Atlantic freights, and owing to Mr. Hughes purchasing the ships and starting the Commonwealth line, no shippers from Great Britain would send ships out here under any circumstances if they could help it, consequently the Government of Australia, jointly with the Imperial Government, were charging the difference between 4s 9d a bushel and 10s 6d a bushel in the carriage of wheat from Australia to England. The huge monopoly created by the two Governments in shipping had boosted up the price of the carriage on wheat higher almost than on any other commodity including frozen meat, on which the carriage was only one penny and a fraction per lb. In order to bolster up Mr. Hughes's purchase of ships and make a fine show when the returns were demanded in the Federal Parliament, the whole business was tied up so far as the carriage of wheat was concerned. The wheat authorities in Australia had sold our wheat at at least 2s per bushel too cheaply if there were a fair deal by the two Governments in the carriage of our wheat from here to England. A similar attempt was made on the Canadian Grain Commission last year. When he was in Winnipeg, in September of last year, wheat was selling at 11s 3d per bushel, which price was realised by the Canadian grower, and the Imperial authorities offered them a ridiculously low price for their wheat. The Canadian farmers refused the offer, saying they would stick to the American market, and consequently they were placed on the same footing as the American grower, and were paid the same price as the latter, who were receiving vastly more for their wheat. The Canadians thus received for their wheat nearly double that was given the Australian farmer.

NEW SEASON'S WHEAT.

The Minister for Agriculture (Mr. Grahame) stated yesterday that no new season's wheat can be received at country railway stations at present. It had been the intention of the State Wheat Office to remove a large quantity of wheat from congested country stations, so that arrangements might be made for having the sites properly cleaned and disinfected in readiness for the new season's wheat, but the strike of the men at Goulburn and the railway strike had put matters back for over two months, and had thus made it practically impossible to have the wheat removed from the country. Arrangements are in progress with the Railway Department for new sites, and matters are being pushed forward rapidly with a view to their being in readiness in the immediate future, but in the meantime farmers should note that they should not rush to the railway the few bags of early wheat. This refers particularly to the northern districts.

A notification will be made in the Press when the sites are in readiness and wheat may be delivered.

JAPANESE HORSES AND CATTLE.

The Premier has received an interesting report from the Commercial Commissioner in the East respecting a horse and cattle show which he attended at Shirotei, in Shimane Ken, on the west coast of Japan.

"Some years ago," writes Mr. Suttor, "Japanese live stock were of very inferior quality, but of late the improvement that has been made is remarkable, more especially by stock imported from Australia. Some of the exhibits would have attracted attention at the Royal Agricultural Show, Sydney, and at the present rate of progress I have every reason to believe that the Government will still further encourage the breeding of horses suitable for general purposes and cows for dairying."

IRRIGATION AREAS.

OFFICIAL STATMENT.

The Minister for Agriculture yesterday referred to statements which have been made regarding alleged friction between the Irrigation Commission and the settlers on the Murrumbidgee irrigation areas, and that a deadlock had been reached between the settlers and the Minister for Agriculture as chairman of the Irrigation Commission, in connection with the compensation claims reported upon by Judge Bevan. Mr. Grahame states that both these statements are quite misleading, and are untrue in fact. He said: "Judge Bevan was appointed by the Cabinet to furnish a report to the Cabinet concerning the alleged failure of lucerne on certain farms, such farms representing a small percentage of the whole area now settled. The Cabinet, on receipt of the report, adopted some of the Judge's findings and modified others. Some of the settlers have accepted the reduced amount of compensation, but approximately 50 out of a total number of about 130 claimants on the irrigation areas have decided, with the advice of the Farmers' Union, not to accept the amounts offered. Anything that the Irrigation Commission has done in connection with this matter has been entirely in the way of carrying out definite decisions of the whole Cabinet, and it is quite incorrect to suggest that any deadlock or friction exists. If there is any deadlock it is between the Cabinet and the settlers, and not between the Irrigation Commission and the settlers.

"Recently I was present when the Acting Premier, as representing the Cabinet, received a deputation from the Farmers' Union executive and its solicitor concerning the unsettled claims, and heard all that these gentlemen desired to say. While on an official visit to the irrigation areas last week my colleagues of the Irrigation Commission extended an invitation to individual settlers concerned in the unsettled claims, and in reply to this invitation the settlers stated that they would meet the commission only if the invitation were extended to the executive of the Farmers' Union and its solicitor. Having already heard these latter gentlemen, and considered their arguments, there was, in my opinion, no need for the invitation to be extended, and the settlers concerned were so informed. They thereupon refused to meet the commissioners.

"There has been a deliberate attempt in some quarters to convey to the public the idea that there is general discontent on the irrigation areas. This is far from being the case. There are nearly 900 settlers at Yanco and Griffith, whereas the number affected by the unsettled compensation claims is in the vicinity of 50, and of that number it is [illegible] that they are bound to take the advice of their union. In regard to this action, it should be stated, for the information of the public, that ever since its formation it has shown an antagonism to the irrigation authorities. Apparently the idea of a certain section of the Farmers' Union is to discourage settlement and postpone as long as possible the division amongst a great many of the good things at Yanco.

"The Resident Commissioner at Leeton now has the work of redesigning the dairying section of the areas well in hand, a large portion now being ready for valuation. This work has been hampered by the Farmers' Union officials, as can be gathered from the following extract from the 'Murrumbidgee Irrigator,' which shows the attitude of the Farmers' Union towards the administration:—

"It was reported that the Resident Commissioner and Mr. Alexander were visiting settlers with the object of fixing them up with additional areas.

"Mr. Adams (secretary of the Farmers' Union) pointed out that the objective of the union was the establishment of a board, which would perform this work. The board the union desired to see set up would be composed of officials and settlers, and he (Mr. Adams) took strong exception to the action of the Commissioner and his officer in anticipating the work which it would be the business of the proposed board to direct. He moved that the executive prepare a circular letter to be sent to all members of the union, advising them to refuse to supply any information to the commission regarding additional areas required until a board had been formed to consider the question. The motion was seconded and carried.

"The statement that the Premier will fix a date for a visit to the irrigation area has no connection with this matter, which is now in course of settlement by the Cabinet, and in which the Cabinet's policy is definitely decided. Mr. Holman has expressed his anxiety to visit the settlement shortly in company with the Minister for Agriculture, and this is apparently being published with the idea of suggestion that the outstanding question of compensation is to be reopened on that occasion. This is not so. The whole Cabinet are in agreement as to the lines to be pursued."

LATE MADAME CHARVIN.

The Premier, Mr. Holman, yesterday afternoon assisted in the last tribute to the late Madame Charvin, who was so well known in musical circles as Yvonne Leverrier. Covered with wreaths, to several of which the French colours were attached, the remains of the amiable and accomplished teacher-pianist rested prior to the funeral in the church of the Sacred Heart, Randwick. While the coffin was being carried from the church to the hearse, Miss Annie Tracy played the Dead March. Commandant Armand Charvin, Mr. Frank Leverrier, K.C. (brother), Mr. H. Leverrier, and Mr. M. Leverrier (nephews), were the chief mourners. At the church, in addition to the members of the bereaved family, were M. Chayet (Consul-General for France), M. Marcus (Vice-Consul), Captain Lamy and the officers and crew of the Messageries Maritimes steamer Pacifique, M. A. Fombartaux (Messageries Maritimes), and Mr. James Ritchie (wharf manager, Messageries Maritimes). The State Conservatorium of Music was represented by Mr. Henri Verbrugghen (director), Mr. A. Stanley Warwick (registrar), Mr Frank Hutchens (professor of pianoforte), and Mr. Florent Hoogstoel (professor of violin).

Among those who followed the remains to the Waverley Cemetery were Sir William M'Millan, Lady M'Millan, Mr Justice Edmunds, Professor Wilson (University of Sydney), Mr. R. G. L. Innes, K.C., Mr. T. W. K. Waldron (city solicitor), Alderman T. Barlow, Mr. John Barlow, Mr. Arthur Barlow, Mr. C. Shard (French Bank), Mr. J. P. Franki (Mort's Dock and Engineering Company), Captain Vine Hall, Mr. James M'Allister (North Coast Company), Mr. H. Mocatta, Mr. F. L. V. Coffey, Mr. T. P. Power, Mr. J. L. Watkins, Mr. J. J. Watkins, Mr. J. A. Flynn, Mr. P. F. Marich, and Mr. W. Dibley (representing W. H. Paling and Co.), Messrs. John Lemmone, J. Gillespie, F. Aengenheyster, John Ramsay, A. Unger (Noumea), P. Durlux, J. Playoust, P. Lamerand, Alfred Wunderlich, H. De Posel, C. Dezarnauld, H. Rainaud, A. C. Gartaner, E. Ducasse, G. Levain, A. Even, R. Dugripon, William F. Shaw, George Brewer, G. Griffin, Miss May Pettifer, Miss Isabelle Ramsay, Miss May Summerbelle, Miss Doxsey, and Miss Evelyn Morgan Shaw.

The Very Rev. P. Treand, M.S.H. (Randwick) officiated at the grave; the Very Rev. P. B. Kennedy, O.F.M. (Waverley) assisting.

SUMMER TIME-TABLE.

It is understood that the new summer railway timetable will come into operation on December 2. Particulars of it will probably be announced early next week.

[illegible]

MELBOURNE, Monday.

Regulations were issued to-day by the Federal authorities controlling the supply and distribution of cornsacks. It is provided that the Federal Prices Commissioner, on the receipt of Ministerial authority, may requisition all or any cornsacks in Australia. People in possession of cornsacks may be required to hand over supplies to other persons at any reasonable time on payment or tender at any rate fixed by regulation. Without the consent of the Commissioner, it is unlawful to cancel or vary any contract for cornsacks, whether made in Australia or elsewhere, and to take any action likely to lessen the number of cornsacks in Australia, or affect the quantity of those arriving or likely to arrive. This regulation is for the purpose of preventing the sale of cornsacks back to Calcutta at prices above those specified in the contract.

LATE MR. W. MONIE, JUN.

Probate has been granted of the will and codicil of the late Mr. William Monie, junior, who died at Burwood on September 25 last. His estate is of the net value of £31,830, of which £16,600 is realty and £5083 shares in public companies. Testator left an annuity of £52 a year to Emily Maud Laverack. The residue of his estate was bequeathed to his widow, Grace Winifred Monie, and his children.

IS THE CENSORSHIP SCIENTIFIC?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The remarks of the Honourable the Premier on Friday, reported in your Saturday's issue, raise important issues for the consideration of the people.

From the tenor of Mr. Holman's remarks it is quite apparent that the censor has been exceedingly active, and that the people of this State, in common with our kindred of the Old Country, have been kept in absolute ignorance of events which it is of the utmost importance should be communicated to them at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Holman speaks of disasters which have never been reported, and of which we are up to the present in absolute ignorance, unless, of course, one had the faculty of reading between the lines when it was apparent that there was a "screw loose" somewhere, and that things were not of the same roseate hue as the censor would have us believe.

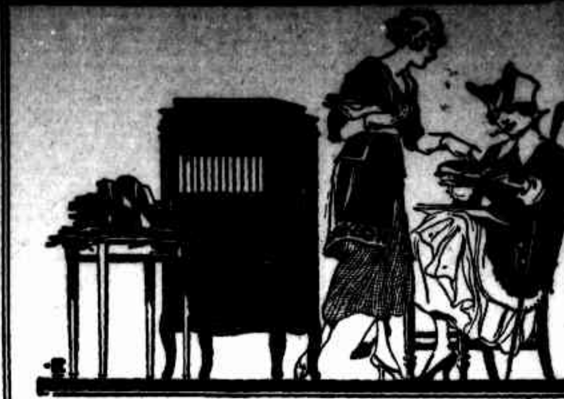

The principal object of censorship is to prevent military secrets which may prove of advantage to the enemy being communicated. If the object of censorship is to conceal from the enemy the position of the Allies this argument must at once fall to the ground, for it is quite apparent that if a disaster, such as has been spoken of, has actually occurred, the enemy are in full possession of the details, and, therefore, there is nothing to hide from them.

If the object is to protect the reputations of politicians or officials, it seems to me the people should rise up and demand to know what it is their right to know, and to insist that censorship should not be allowed for such purposes.

The only other argument against a full disclosure is that a full knowledge of the position of affairs may possibly induce a panic. This risk may safely be taken, as otherwise there is nothing in the belief that "A Briton is never at his best until he has his back against the wall." If it is necessary, for goodness sake let every Briton have his back up against the wall, and bring out his best attributes. It is quite apparent that a great crime in keeping the people in ignorance of the facts is about to be committed. The people are asked to vote on the 20th proximo on a matter of the utmost importance to the whole of this Commonwealth. They are asked to vote on such information as it may please the censor, acting under the directions of the Federal Government, to disclose. In my opinion, the question to be decided on the 20th proximo is one which can only be intelligently voted upon if the true facts of the case are made known, and that, in the absence of a full disclosure, forming an intelligent opinion on such information as is allowed to leak out, which may or may not be correct, is a matter of practical impossibility.

I am one of those who believe in a full and complete disclosure, and shall be pleased to co-operate with any of my fellow-citizens having similar views, with the idea of at once forming a party, having for its objects the forcing of the Federal Government to remove the strict conditions of censorship. Trusting this will meet with a generous response,

I am, etc., PERCY W. BERNE.

CALL TO THE COUNTRY.

At Bendigo last night the Prime Minister gave the call to Australia, which opens another referendum campaign. The country is in danger. It is in danger so real that practically any determination by the Government short of repudiating a definite pledge can be justified if it covers sound strategy and honest intentions. We could imagine the Germans so near to final victory, with another successful drive like the one which has brought the enemy to the gates of Venice, that the Cabinet sitting in Melbourne would at once order every man and woman to do something to defend their hearths and homes. There would be no breaking of a pledge if Australia could be best defended by anticipating an attack from, say, the north or east, and by sending soldiers at once out of the Commonwealth. Everyone, with inspiring leadership, would agree to do his or her best, without question as to pledges given more than a year ago. But Mr. Hughes does not propose to use plenary power in this way, nor does he assume that a pledge given with full knowledge of its binding force can be put aside even in the present emergency, grave as it is. He does assert, however, that the emergency is graver than has been imagined, that Australia must, in self-defence if not in honour, keep her divisions at the front reinforced, and that to refuse to endorse the Government's proposals is to repudiate the Government itself. Briefly, it is proposed that single men, between the ages of 20 and 44, shall be called up, and widowers without families; but only so as to supplement voluntary enlistments when the number falls short of the required 7000 per month. This certainly seems but little beside what Canada, New Zealand, and Great Britain herself have accepted, and as such it is open to serious criticism. But it is something. Our reinforcements at any rate will be assured. Yet we are faced with a crisis so serious that our very existence as a Commonwealth is at stake. The referendum, even in this modified form, must be carried; for, if in the last ditch we draw out, and insist that Australia has done enough, we shall forfeit our rights to consideration in some future when the enemy, if not the Empire itself, may have to decide our fate. Suppose, for instance, that Germany were in a position to demand Australia and her own colonies back, if she agreed to a peace otherwise acceptable to the Allies, could we expect to be considered if we had declined to see the war through? Our continued sacrifice may well be the very pledge of our salvation. Even if it be assumed that victory will ultimately be on our side, how can we hope to take our place in the councils of the nations with the brand of the deserter upon our shoulder? The most momentous issues will be decided some day in which everything for us will depend upon being able to present our case fairly before our own kinsfolk first, but also before the world at large, when peace is proclaimed. Victory won without us will be our immediate handicap; and defeat will be our cruellest condemnation. It will bar the door against us when a conference of the Powers is called; and when the new life of peace has to be lived our troubles will begin instead of ending with the rest.

But Mr. Hughes does not discuss possible victory. He is concerned with present defeat, with the desperate condition of Russia and the plight of Italy. He can see that there is no chance of victory except as every part of the British Empire rallies round the mother country in her new dilemma. Self-interest demands that we shall do as the other Dominions are doing, and as Great Britain herself has done—devote their manhood and the whole of their resources to defeating Germany. This was our pledge at the commencement. Mr. Hughes and his colleagues are not on any account to break their pledge, but apparently Australia may break the pledge which a Labour Prime Minister gave so solemnly when war was declared, and everything figuratively was laid upon the altar of sacrifice. There were no dissentients in those days. Nobody thought of making conscription a political bogey, or of stirring up strife for the sake of a new cry. Labour was in power, and accepted the formula of "the last man and the last shilling" as quite fairly representing the Commonwealth's readiness to stand by Great Britain to the end of the war—whatever the cost. And Labour has done well in the war. It has sent its manhood forward and contributed with the rest of us to keep Australian troops supplied with comforts and the best of nursing. The true unionism of the country has not flinched at the thought of sacrifice, and we believe that it is not flinching now that a Nationalist Government has called for the Commonwealth's endorsement of its proposals to raise men for the reinforcement of Australian divisions at the front. This is a demand that we shall keep faith, and that we shall honour our pledge. What we require of the Prime Minister and his colleagues on the one side is a fair thing for us to give on the other. It is a demand made imperative by the facts, not because Mr. Hughes is afraid that our reinforcements will fail. They have failed; and the war has brought disaster to the Allies, so that nothing remains for us but the acceptance of compulsory service or the definite relinquishment of our place in the ranks of the Allies as a fighting Dominion. But the Prime Minister calls for more than a grudging vote to this end. He asks that we shall rally to the side of the Government. It may be suggested that the State Government can now help him with hearty good will. State Ministers have also given a pledge, but this surely concerned proposals that are now shelved. A new situation in the war itself has developed, and the Federal Government asks for something quite different from its original demand. This, however, must be a matter for Mr. Holman and his colleagues. The emergency calls for the fullest co-operation everywhere; and if the State Government hangs back it will be a serious loss in the campaign which will fill the next six weeks of our history. No small fears or futilities should be allowed to stand in the way. Every true patriot must be prepared to strip for the fight to assure Australia's continuance in the war; and not only State Ministers, but private individuals, who before halted between two opinions, must accept the modified proposals of the Federal Government, and persuade others to follow. This is our immediate duty to the Empire; and honour and self-interest call us to make now a smaller sacrifice.

[Written, after consultation, to express the views of the "Sydney Morning Herald," by C. Brunsdon Fletcher, 28 Hunter-street, Sydney.]

ITALY AND RUSSIA.

There is no part of the English-speaking world in which the message of the King of Italy to his people will not be read with sympathy and hope. It aptly recalls the most inspiring chapter in the history of the last century, during which Italy grew from a medley of oppressed States into a kingdom under the house of Savoy. The War of Liberation ended in the triumph of democracy over the embodiment of despotism—mental, moral, and political. The Austrians left a nation which had gained its freedom by the aid of two liberty-loving peoples, and could find a continual inspiration in the sacrifices of its own leaders. Unfortunately it was able to prevent the work of those leaders from ever being completed. The traces of servitude which Austrian rule had left on some elements of the Italian population had not been eradicated before the outbreak of this war. The Austrians were able to retain a frontier behind which they could protect themselves, and from which they could advance on to the Italian plains. Within their frontiers they retained the cities inhabited by Italians whose names were inscribed on the statue of Dante at Ravenna as a perpetual reminder to their fellow-citizens of half fulfilled ambitions. The King's message, while it recalls achievements and hopes, warns his subjects that there is grave danger lest the unity of his kingdom be destroyed and its life extinguished. The enemy has overwhelmed one line of defence and is threatening another. His armies are occupying part of the plain of Venice, whence it was thought that he had been banished for ever. All the friends of Italy will rejoice to hear that in the midst of their disappointments the mass of the people have been worthy of the traditions to which the King appeals. In spite of their weakness in munitions they have delayed the enemy's advance, and have thrown him back at one point in his outlet from the Trentino. The news of successful rearguard actions is a miserable consolation to compare with the prospects of two months ago. But it renews our hope that the Italians will find a line of defence on which the Allies can help them. We are warned officially that the situation of the defensive line will not be disclosed until the battle has been joined. The only facts of which we can be certain are that the situation of Italy is critical, that the new kingdom is fighting for its freedom and its life, and that the soldiers, on their native soil, are recovering from the panic into which they were thrown by the first overwhelming attack. The next few days must throw some light on the immediate intentions of the Allies. Every day by which the invasion can be delayed tells in their favour, for their first necessity is to help the Italians with munitions. The new Allied Council can hardly make itself felt in the present crisis. Had it been formed when we were told that the Allies had secured complete unity of direction there might have been no Italian defeat. If it is kept free from political demands it may in the future be able to allocate the strength of the Allies in men and munitions to the fronts on which they are most needed. It can hardly be the instrument for saving a nation when the invaders are on her territory, when all her plans have been destroyed, and when she needs immediately all the forces of which the Allies can dispose to preserve her existence.

The cablegrams from Russia encourage the belief that the attempt of the Leninites to expel the Provisional Government may be the beginning of a national reorganisation. It will finally prove to M. Kerensky that a union of all the revolutionary parties is impossible. He and his principal colleagues were on the side of the Leninites at the time when M. Miliukoff issued his first statement of the new Government's aims in the war. He definitely parted from them at the Congress of Workmen and Soldiers' Deputies, when Lenin declared that the offensive was the continuation of an Imperialist carnage, and that the first duty of the Government was to throw capitalists into prison. Kerensky then warned the Congress that the path on which they were entering led to destruction. By refusing to allow any Government to exercise authority they were preparing chaos, and from chaos the only certain product was a dictator. Kerensky himself has sedulously avoided the temptations of a dictatorship, both as Minister for War and as Prime Minister. The persistent opposition of extremists, however, has driven him towards that section of the revolutionists which would welcome the re-establishment of authority and the use of force where necessary. He accepted the advice of this party, with reservations at the Moscow Congress, but misunderstood the intentions of General Korniloff. Having gone so far, he will now be compelled to go farther. The Leninite revolution will convince him that the fruits of the revolution, to the preparation of which he devoted his youth and his health, cannot be preserved without sacrifice and discipline. Lenin supported his appeal by offers of wealth and peace and ease for all except the former owners of property. Kerensky warns the whole nation that neither the freedom nor the existence of the nation will be safe unless material enjoyments are postponed and the Central Powers defeated. Such a doctrine is not calculated to tempt an army which has experienced the sufferings of the Russian armies during 1915. Kerensky's personality, his authority, and Russian patriotism, however, have won over a sufficient force to promise the rescue of the Government and the regeneration of the capital. Kerensky's triumph would not mean the addition of large numbers of soldiers to the Allied armies. It means that Russia will have an army in being, as she has had during the past year. The paramount duty of the Prime Minister will be to secure the people from starvation and to remedy the transport systems, which the bureaucracy had allowed to perish both on the frontiers and in the interior. A stable government for Russia will probably count more for the future than for the present. It means that the country may have a part in the councils of the Allies, and that in the future there will be one country to unite all the members of the Slav race and preserve their identity.

THE "SYDNEY MAIL."

What the New South Wales Government is doing in arranging for the settlement of returned soldiers on the land is described in this week's "Mail," which publishes a number of most interesting pictures illustrating the settlements that have been established in various parts of the State in connection with the Federal repatriation scheme. A good deal of prominence is given to the conscription question, statements by Sir William Irvine, Mr. Holman, Professor Macintyre, and many others being printed. The success of General Allenby's campaign against the Turks gives especial interest to a page of snapshots from Palestine, and a well-written account of the country in which our men are operating. The Italian disaster is also given prominence, and there is a fine article by Pierre Loti, describing his impressions of the Carso, which he visited a few months ago. There are many pictures from the Western Front, and, as usual, numerous particulars of killed and wounded soldiers and members of fighting families. The Cleveland-street School jubilee, the Melbourne Cup finish, and various other subjects are included in the illustrations.

OUR DAY.

FOR THE BRITISH RED CROSS.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING.

The following message addressed by his Majesty the King to the British Red Cross Society in connection with "Our Day" appeal throughout the Empire, has been received by her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson:—

"Buckingham Palace.—During the past 12 months I have had constant opportunity of witnessing afresh, both at home and in Flanders, the great work of mercy carried on by the united efforts of the British Red Cross and its oversea branches, and the Order of St. John. In every theatre of the war, regardless of distance, discomfort, or danger, the task of alleviating pain and suffering, and of ministering to those in need, is performed with unparalleled devotion by the men and women who have taken service under the Red Cross. The prompt and unstinted provision of medical and general stores and comforts is an all-important work, and one of the main responsibilities undertaken by the joint committee. In hospitals and convalescent homes, hospital trains, motor ambulances, and launches, our sick and wounded, as well as those of our Allies, are, I know, indeed grateful for the aid and co-operation which the joint societies bring to the medical services of the armies, nor have the needs of our prisoners of war been forgotten in the allocation of your funds. I trust, therefore, that there will be no falling off of the generous financial support on the part of everyone at home and in the dominions overseas, without which this work cannot be maintained during the war. I have had great satisfaction in sending to the joint committee on October 20 a donation of £5,000. This year, for the 'Our Day' collection it is a pleasure to me to contribute £10,000 to mark my appreciation of what has been achieved by the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John in the past, and my deep sense of the importance of continuing these achievements in the future.
"GEORGE R.I."

REASONS FOR "OUR DAY."

EMPIRE-WIDE APPLICATION.

At the annual meeting of the New South Wales divisional headquarters of the Red Cross Society yesterday afternoon, special references were made by the speakers to "Our Day" effort on November 30.

The chairman, Mr. J. O. Fairfax, said the situation as far as the war was concerned being as it was, we must not forget, in the midst of all the political responsibilities placed upon us, that "Our Day" had special claims. He sincerely hoped that, important as other issues were, we should, as far as possible, not allow those other issues to obscure this one. He hoped that the movement would be a huge success. (Applause.) There were responsibilities to be met, there was a duty to be done, and that duty must not be neglected. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. J. Ashton, M.L.C., also referring to "Our Day," said the object of the effort on November 30 was to replenish the funds of the Red Cross throughout the Empire. The British Red Cross had asked that a day be set apart all over the Empire for this purpose, but, unfortunately for the New South Wales branch of the organisation, that day would have come into conflict with the War Chest organisation. Yet, it seemed to the executive here that it could not possibly let the year 1917 pass without making the 1917 appeal on behalf of the parent society, the British Red Cross. This was an urgent appeal upon which they were entering, in which the people of this State were asked to participate. Circulars had been distributed amongst all the branches, accompanied by an appeal from her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, and by a statement showing the extent and magnitude of the activities of the parent society. Lady Helen Munro Ferguson's appeal made clear the grounds upon which we in far-off Australia were asked to make a big contribution to the funds of the British Red Cross, and it was also sought to be made perfectly clear that the money which the public of New South Wales would be asked for in connection with this appeal was not to be used exclusively for the benefit of Australian soldiers and sailors. In order that no person might have any misapprehension it was carefully explained that this appeal was made in the interests of the Red Cross activities of the whole of the British Empire on all fighting fronts. The British Red Cross work extended to places where the Australian Red Cross did not penetrate, but Australian forces were fighting or Australian men were there, and no distinction was made between Australian or other soldiers or men of whatever force they belonged to. The British Red Cross relieved the wants of all of them. Therefore, the appeal was made for the benefit of the whole of the Empire troops. (Applause.) The Australian Red Cross was dependent upon the activities of the British Red Cross for a great deal of its usefulness. Our society had been able, thanks to its organisation, to find particulars of many men whom relatives here were anxious to trace; it had an army of investigators in every zone, in every hospital, and had it not been for its activities our own organisation would not have been able to do the work it had in relieving the suspense of relatives here. If we only realised the work of the British Red Cross we should appraise its usefulness to the whole Empire. It made no distinction, as he had before said, between soldiers from any other part of the Empire and those from Australia. Its activities were manifest wherever troops were found, and it had laid the Australian Red Cross under a very heavy debt by the way in which it had cared for and helped our men. (Applause.) It might be possible to appraise, with great difficulty, the value of that work in terms of money, but no amount which we could possibly send would over-pay the British Red Cross for its service. However weighty our responsibilities, the responsibilities of the British were infinitely greater. If it were possible for Australia to draw out altogether from the war it would still go on, but if the mother country were defeated, if it drew out of the war, then we must rest assured that this Australia of ours would go down in the general wreckage of a ruined Empire. (Hear, hear.) The expenditure of the British Red Cross Society amounted to the immense sum of £50,000 a week. On Friday last Mr. Cohen had delivered a very informing speech on this subject, and he would advise the members to get a copy of this speech and study it. He urged all to work for the success of "Our Day." (Applause.)

The chairman said it was only right that the members should understand that the work was being carried out in connection with the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in conjunction with the British Red Cross. He had pleasure in making acknowledgment of the work of the Order mentioned, because it was only its due. (Hear, hear.)

MEETING OF COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the sub-committee of the Red Cross executive was held yesterday afternoon to consider various matters in connection with "Our Day" movement.

It was announced that his Excellency the Acting Governor (Sir William Cullen) had consented to preside at the opening ceremony in Martin-place on November 30. The arrangements for the opening were left in the hands of a sub-committee consisting of Miss Eadith Walker, Mrs. Ashton, and Miss N. Cossett Stephen. It was decided to ask Mrs. Joscelyne to take charge of the cash boxes on "Our Day."

Miss Egan, who had been entrusted with the ordering of suitable badges, submitted a number of very attractive designs, from which the committee made selections.

It was stated that the authorities of the Commonwealth Bank had undertaken to look after the banking arrangements on the day.

LEICHHARDT.

The municipality of Leichhardt, as well as the local branch of the Red Cross, is entering with great interest into "Our Day" scheme. At a meeting at the local Town Hall last night, the Mayor (Alderman A. R. Blackmore) in the chair, it was unanimously resolved to hold a day for the British Red Cross movement on November 30, and that all those present form a committee, with power to add to their number, to further this object. Mr. Nicholls moved, and Alderman Cunningham seconded, a resolution, which was carried, that the form the appeal should take should consist of stalls similar to those on France's Day, the sale of emblems and buttons, and a street collection. The help of other patriotic associations was arranged to be called in, and it was resolved that the town clerk, Mr. Reeves (who was elected by the meeting hon. secretary of "Our Day" movement), and Mr. Spencer (who was elected hon. treasurer) should call on the ladies of the Red Cross and on the War Comforts committee to make arrangements. A speaker pointed out how indefatigable the women workers of the district had been on former days, and he thought that nowhere could better and more devoted workers for patriotic causes be found than could be seen in Leichhardt. Mr. Reeves considered that the present meeting formed an excellent nucleus for the movement, and everything looked most promising. The details of allotting stalls and obtaining supplies of badges and flags were then gone into. Stalls were allotted to Mrs. Hastings (president of Leichhardt Red Cross branch), Mrs. Woolbrook, Mrs. Hedder, Mrs. Nelleon, Mrs. Race, Mrs. Blackmore, and Mrs. Reeves. An apology for absence was received from Mrs. Jackson (hon. secretary of the Red Cross branch). The speakers were Mr. Breen, Alderman Cunningham, Mr. Rohu, Mr. Nicholls, Mr. Spencer, Mr. Gracie, and the town clerk.

BALMAIN.

The public meeting convened at Balmain was highly successful, there being an excellent attendance. The gathering was held in the Town Hall, and the Mayor (Mr. H. P. Scott) presided. Two resolutions were passed, the first being: "That all present form themselves into a committee," and the second: "That the whole of the organisation and management be handed over to the local Red Cross Societies to conduct."

The first resolution was proposed by Alderman M'Kenzie, seconded by Alderman Beavis, and supported by Messrs. M. A. H. Fitzhardinge and S. H. P. Burns. The second was proposed by Alderman Thornton, and seconded by Alderman Mainwright. Mr. Withers also spoke. Mrs. Alfred Lee, representing the Red Cross Society, gave a most interesting address relating to the work of the society abroad. She said that 16 millions of money had already been expended, and that the output at the present time worked out at £5 a minute. She gave a short resume of the wonderful enthusiasm displayed all over the world, and mentioned that in one town in Batavia alone no less than £5000 had been raised in a single night for Red Cross funds. In connection with the hospital trains, she had much of interest to tell. One train, which had been raised and equipped by Princess Christian, was worthy of special mention, inasmuch as one subscription alone was £10,000. With this generous cheque were the following words: "From one with a grateful heart for mercies shown." Mrs. Lee also traced the work of the Red Cross from one country to the other, and gave instances of its many deeds of mercy. She concluded with a tribute to the voluntary organisation—that voluntary self-sacrifice which cannot be bought with money, and which has made the British Red Cross Society the magnificent institution that it is to-day.

Mrs. Lee was warmly thanked for her interesting address, and the following office-bearers were then elected: President, the Mayor; secretaries, Mrs. Thompson Brown (hon. sec. Balmain Red Cross) and Mrs. Harrod (Rozelle Red Cross); hon. treasurers, Mrs. Minty (Balmain Red Cross) and Mr. Strange (Rozelle Red Cross). The proceedings closed with the National Anthem.

TAMWORTH.—The Tamworth branch of the Red Cross Society has voted £150 as its contribution to "Our Day" for the British Red Cross Society. This makes £500 sent this year by the Tamworth branch to the British Red Cross Society.

The postal authorities notify that approval has been given for all mail matter bearing on the covers the rubber stamp impression "Our Day," Friday, 30th November, to be allowed to pass without surcharge, provided the words "Red Cross" also appear on the stamp.

"NEVER SO DARK."

BISHOP LONG ON THE SITUATION.

BATHURST, Monday.

The war position was referred to by Bishop Long in All Saints' Cathedral last night. He said that we were being pressed sorely. There was no possibility surely of our disguising the fact that we were standing in peril. Never was the outlook so dark since the first days of the war. We had scarcely ever let the possibility of failure cross our mind, but to-day when we looked abroad upon the situation we must surely see that we were being taken as it were before and behind. We should look at the situation for a moment as it would probably be viewed in Berlin. We would find if we had candour of mind and sufficient understanding that the people in Berlin would be saying:—"Now our designs are nearing completion. Now we are in the position of soon imposing our will, we have reduced our foes one by one. We have Russia at our mercy—so much at our mercy that we need not waste any powder, shot, or men against her. We can wait, and can well afford to wait, for the development that will come so early to us. The eastern front is ours—none can wrest it from us. Italy is broken—she is lost. We have her from within and from without. France is brave, but is bearing a burden which will be too great for her when the enemy brings his released pressure against her. The English will be broken finally last of all. When every other Power is broken they shall be broken upon the wheel." "This," said Dr. Long, "must surely be the position from the enemy's view-point, and so with the latest news that is coming to us we should see and think afresh. To do this we need courage, a clear vision, and a clear conscience. We should fly to the assistance of Italy. We should have one purpose, one command, one undivided intelligence, a unanimity of strategy, and one concentrated and concerted force."

INVALID SOLDIERS.

ARRIVING TO-MORROW.

Another contingent of invalid soldiers will arrive to-morrow morning from Melbourne by four special trains, and friends and relations who have received tickets marked "T" from the staff officer for invalids will be admitted to the Anzac Buffet at 9.30 a.m. to meet the New South Wales men. The names of cot cases will be posted at the Anzac Buffet on the arrival of the first train, and their relations will be able to go to the Randwick Hospital to meet them.

As the trains will arrive at intervals throughout the forenoon, all attending at the Anzac Buffet are advised to bring sandwiches with them, as they may have a long time to wait. The Red Cross will provide a cup of tea for the soldiers and their relations as the men arrive.

The Queensland soldiers will not leave the platform, and will be given morning tea and go straight on to Brisbane by a special train at 11.15 a.m. The Newtown Men's Voluntary Aid Detachment will be in attendance.

Motor cars numbered on the register of the Red Cross Society from 52 to 88 are required to be at the Chalmers-street entrance to the railway station at 10 a.m. to-morrow, and cars numbered from 89 to 186 are required to be there at 1 p.m.

The V.A.Ds. on duty will be:—Meeting trains, Turramurra V.A.D.; Anzac Buffet, Bondi-Waverley V.A.D. (with Mosman under Miss Evans); Queenslanders' tea at station, St. Vincent's V.A.D.

HISTORIC RECORDS.

THE DEPARTMENT OF LANDS.

For some time past the council of the Australian Historical Society has been desirous of suggesting a means by which much of the historical material locked away in the archives of the Lands Department might be investigated, and valuable information made available for the public, and particularly for the benefit of students. The hon. secretary (Mr. K. R. Cramp, M.A.) recently approached the Under-Secretary for Lands (Mr. A. J. Hare), and requested that the Minister for Lands (Mr. Ashford) should set apart a highly qualified officer of his department to examine these documents, and classify them for ready reference, with a view to making public such information as would prove of interest to Australian students, and at the same time provide unassailable material for reference. The Minister, it is stated, has notified his approval of the request, and his intention to secure the appointment of an officer in whom the society has the utmost confidence. It is contemplated that the vast accumulation of papers referring to the early affairs of the colony, and which documents are now to a great extent unclassified, will be put in order. Selections from those preserved will be prepared from time to time for publication. The Historical Society will provide space in its journal for the publication of material of unusual interest or value, since by that medium hundreds of persons interested in the old records will be reached.

GLOUCESTER ELECTION.

The poll at Barry, Cedar Grove, and Cundle Flat, in connection with the Gloucester election, has been deferred until next Saturday, on account of the floods and the inability of electors to get to the polling-places. The returns from the three centres above-mentioned cannot affect the result, as the enrolments for them aggregate only 129. The latest figures give Mr. R. A. Price, the late member, a total of 2740 votes, as against Mr. L. O. Martin's 2535, or a majority for the former of 1205.

SCOTTISH WOMEN'S HOSPITALS.

MRS. ABBOTT'S STIRRING STORY.

A lady of magnetic personality, and an easy and versatile conversationalist, Mrs. G. F. Abbott, now on a visit to this State, told a fascinating story of the Scottish Women's Hospitals, in the course of a speech last night before a large and representative gathering at the headquarters of the Highland Society of New South Wales. It is in order to raise funds to assist in the upkeep of those hospitals that Mrs. Abbott is now visiting Australia. The president of the Highland Society (Colonel Sir James Burns) presided. Others present included Sir Chas. Mackellar, Mr. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C., Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., and the chairman of the executive of the Red Cross Society (Mr. J. O. Fairfax). Apologies for unavoidable absence, accompanied by expressions of good wishes for the success of Mrs. Abbott's mission, were received from Sir James Fairfax, Professor MacCallum, Mr. J. T. Walker, and Mr. James Chalmers.

Mrs. Abbott, who was warmly received, said that among the objects of the Highland Society was one to afford advice to Scottish immigrants. She liked that object because at the moment she felt very much like a temporary Scottish immigrant. (Laughter.) The statement had been made at a conscription meeting—and she knew it to be true—that when conscription was introduced at home, there were practically no men left in Scotland to conscript. (Applause.) Equally heroic was the part which the Scottish women had played in the formation of these hospitals and along many other channels of activity connected with the war. The Scottish Women's hospitals had grown from small beginnings to do a magnificent work in the far-flung theatres of war, until to-day their usefulness had been recognised throughout the Empire. Mrs. Abbott spoke of these gallant women's rush across to Calais, there to take over a hospital to deal with the infection of typhus. The Allies were not slow to recognise the extraordinary efficiency of these hospitals, and in this connection she spoke of the requests for them from this quarter and that in order to help to alleviate the sufferings following in the train of the war. One hospital unit alone was doubled and re-doubled at the request of the French authorities. These hospitals were run entirely by women. There were women doctors, women orderlies, women chauffeurs, women cleaners-up, and so on, no matter how menial or sordid the work might be—and there was much of it that was sordid. By way of an experiment at the request of the French authorities they established a camp hospital. It moved with the French expeditionary force, and was under Mrs. Harley, who was lost later, having been killed by a shell in Monastir. That hospital had become one of the model camp hospitals in Salonica. According to a recent message from Edinburgh, these brave women had added to their work by establishing a 200-bed hospital in the French firing line. Not only were the men risking their lives in the firing line; these women were there, too, in order to save the lives of others. The work, however, of these Scottish Women's Hospitals that had touched the imagination of the world, was that undertaken in aid of stricken Servia—a nation which had suffered more perhaps even than heroic Belgium. In different centres there four units were responsible for just on 1000 beds. These women worked in the different war zones as women seldom worked; they worked heroically and cheerfully amidst typhus, which had no horror for them; they worked amidst appalling processions of sick and wounded men, and sick and dying refugees, and they worked to the grim music of the guns, always with the knowledge that that music might come nearer to them. Mrs. Abbott gave a vivid account of their work along the line of retreat before the Austrians, and the imprisonment by the Austrians of a party of the women, and the treatment of them as common prisoners. She spoke of the way in which these women not only ministered to refugees in the worst possible plight, but wanted to get back to help stricken Servia. The Roumanian retreat, in which these women again figured heroically, was little less tragic than the Servian retreat, although the one followed closely on the other. In this connection the last letter received from one of these women was to the effect that they had been moved forward to a spot in the firing line, with the enemy on the other side of a hill shelling them. The women said they were glad to go forward, where there was more work to do. There, as on the Somme, and in every other field where they laboured, their heroism was splendid. Mrs. Abbott referred also to the 200-bed hosital in Monastir, and to the work of two Australians—Dr. Lilian Cooper, of Brisbane, and Miss Bedford, whose organisation of the motor transport had won special admiration.

And so Mrs. Abbott went on. She spoke of the women's motor transports and hospitals, their travelling x-ray cars which visited hospitals which would otherwise be deprived of them facilities; the work in Salonica, known as the Calcutta unit, and on the different fronts where it was readily appreciated by the British, French, Servian, and other Allied Governments. These hospitals had started out to be Scottish; they had become world-wide, Imperial, in scope. The appeal which she was making was not an outside appeal. There were no outside appeals in this war. (Applause.) There had never been a moment in the history of the war when it had been more necessary than at present for those who could go to the help of the Allies, to go, and for those who could give, to give. (Applause.)

It was decided that a deputation wait upon the Lord Mayor with a request that he should convene a meeting of citizens with a view to forming an executive committee to assist Mrs. Abbott's mission. The following were appointed to further this project:—Sir Jas. Burns, Sir T. Anderson Stuart, Sir Chas. Mackellar, Dr. A. Jarvie Hood, Rev. John Ferguson, Messrs. Dugald Thomson, H. Adamson, J. M. Pringle, Jas. Muir, Duncan Carson, John Stewart, Alec Gray, W. Mack Walker, A. W. Meeks, M.L.C., J. O. Fairfax, Shannon, Kelso King, Adrian Knox, K.C., David Mitchell, W. R. Alexander, Findlay Munro, W. McD. Sutherland, J. M. Dempster, T. C. Hamilton, J. D. Robertson, and Miss Meeks.

Addresses appreciative of the Scottish Women's Hospitals were delivered by Sir Chas. Mackellar and Messrs. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C., Adrian Knox, and Kelso King. It was announced that £1034 had been subscribed in the room, including £300, the gift of the Highland Society, which proposes to give over to the fund the proceeds of the New Year's Day sports. The subscriptions include the following sums:—£150 from Sir Jas. Burns, £100 from Burns, Philp, and Co., £100 from Mr. Kelso King, and £50 each from Sir Chas. Mackellar, Sir Jas. Fairfax, Mr. Adam Forsyth, and the Queensland Insurance Company.

MELBOURNE-SYDNEY FLIGHT.

LIEUT. STUTT'S RECORD.

By his flight from Sydney to Melbourne and back in a Curtiss biplane, Flight-Lieutenant Stutt, of the State Aviation School, who made the return journey yesterday, has established a record as far as Australia is concerned. During his long flight he made only one stop—at Cootamundra—thus establishing the long distance record for Australasia. He is also the only aviator who has flown from Sydney to Melbourne in the one day. Owing to engine trouble, Lieutenant Stutt was compelled to leave at Cootamundra the passenger who accompanied him from Melbourne.

Speaking to a "Herald" reporter last night, Lieutenant Stutt said:—"I left the Point Cook aerodrome at 6 o'clock. The weather was good till I reached Benalla. Soon after, however, I struck very bad weather—heavy rains and low clouds. I passed over Albury at 7.30, and arrived at Cootamundra at three minutes past 10. I resumed the journey at twenty minutes past 11, and finally landed at Richmond at 2.30 p.m."

After leaving Goulburn, Lieutenant Stutt struck a thunderstorm, and was blown a little way out to sea.

The actual flying time for the trip was 7 hours 10 minutes, or an average of 80 miles per hour, and the highest altitude attained during the flight was between 11,000 and 12,000 feet.

KERENSKY RALLIES

FALL OF BOLSHEVIKS

"A MATTER OF HOURS"

LONDON, Nov. 12.

Advices from Paris received in New York say it is reported that Kerensky has arrived at the Army Headquarters, and heads 200,000 men. Fighting is reported in the streets of Petrograd.

A Russian official report states: Regiments faithful to the Government and the revolution, and in agreement with the Soviet, the Cossacks, and all democratic organisations, have occupied Tsarskoe Selo town and the chief radio station. The rebels are retiring in disorderly mobs on Petrograd. Severe measures will be taken against marauders and pillagers. Those caught will be shot. The rebels will be handed over to the Military Revolutionary Court.

M. Malevski, Commissary of the Petrograd Military District, and a member of the All-Russian Committee for Saving the Country and the Revolution, has issued proclamations to the soldiers of Petrograd as follows:—"Gallant regiments from the front, faithful to the revolution and the country, have approached the capital. In order to avoid the shedding of innocent blood, arrest immediately all betraying and ruining the country, and send delegations to the regiments moving from the front."

The Russian Commissary, M. Stankevitch, has issued proclamations to the army organisations and commissaries as follows:—

"The revolt against the Bolsheviks is increasing in Petrograd. Attacks on them commenced to-day with fusillades in the streets.

"The General Army Committee has occupied the telephone exchange and removed the Bolsheviks.

"The Red Guard has been defeated at Moscow.

"M. Kerensky is approaching Petrograd. Towards evening communication was established with him.

"The liquidation of the Bolshevik adventure is only a matter of days and hours."

Sunday's Russian messages confirm the dramatic change in the situation, showing that the Provisional Government, after four days, has regained control of communications with the outer world.

The proclamations issued by M. Marevske and M. Stankevitch constitute the first news of the overthrow of the Bolsheviks and the establishment in power of a new organisation named the All-Russian Committee for the Saving of the Country and the Revolution. This committee sent a delegation to meet M. Kerensky, who was reported on Saturday to be at Gatchina, 30 miles away, holding the town with a small Cossack army. M. Kerensky's arrival in Petrograd is expected hourly. Food conditions in Petrograd are serious, there being only two days' supply.

KERENSKY'S ARMY.

A report from Haparanda (Sweden) states that M. Kerensky has an army of over 200,000 devoted to his cause, and it will probably be unnecessary to march on Petrograd. The latest news indicates a veritable battle in the streets there. Cossacks and Minimalist troops having placed the Leninist troops in a difficult position.

Details of M. Kerensky's flight show that he learned that General Verkhovsky (Minister for War) had been conferring with M. Lenin and M. Trotsky, and a Bolshevik coup d'etat was contemplated aiming to create General Verkhovsky Generalissimo and dictator. Kerensky ordered General Verkhovsky to leave Petrograd. The latter and his secretary returned on 6th inst. and completed the anti-Kerensky plot.

M. Kerensky discovered that secret meetings were being held in the barracks, also the defection of gunners from the Peter and Paul Fortress, and the crew of the cruiser Aurora. Seeing that resistance was impossible, owing to the fewness of loyal troops, Kerensky fled on the night of November 6-7, hidden in a motor ambulance. It is understood he was accompanied by M. Teretschenko (Minister for Foreign Affairs) and General Alexieff. Maximalist patrols thrice stopped the vehicle without discovering M. Kerensky.

STRONG MAN'S OPPORTUNITY.

The Washington correspondent of the New York "Times" believes that Bolshevik rule cannot endure. The outbreak furnishes an opportunity for a strong man to assume control and establish an orderly administration.

Washington officials state that the United States will withhold recognition of the Bolsheviki, and will also withhold credits and supplies for Russia, until a stable Government has been formed.

Mr. Shepherd, of the United Press Agency, Petrograd, has arrived in New York. He says that if the Kerensky party form a new Government in Moscow they will carry a sufficient army to keep up a semblance of war. That is the most that is to be expected of Russia. It is not anticipated that there will be civil war outside Petrograd.

LENIN'S APPEAL.

ARMISTICE SUGGESTED.

The Lenin Government issued a manifesto on Saturday inviting all the belligerents to commence negotiations for a democratic and just peace without annexations, suggesting a three-months' armistice for negotiations, stating that the Russian Government is abolishing secret diplomacy, and will carry on peace negotiations openly.

It was also proposed to publish the secret treaties.

The new Provisional Government signed this manifesto, which specially appealed to the workmen and peasants of Germany, France, and England.

A New York message states that a despatch from Petrograd interprets a portion of Lenin's speech before the Soviet to mean that Germany must accept democracy. He said: "The new democracy of Russia offers immediate peace. In the event of a negative reply from Germany it will be necessary to continue the war for democratic ideals. Such war may entail terrible consequences. Success depends on firm organisation and iron discipline in the army."

The "Daily Telegraph's" correspondent at Haparanda states that about 200 people were killed in the streets of Petrograd on Tuesday and Wednesday, when the fighting resulted in the Maximalists taking over control.

A Christiania message says the "Tidens Tegn's" Petrograd correspondent, reports that M. Lenin is Premier, and M. Trotzky Minister for Foreign Affairs. The rest of the Cabinet are Maximalists. The latter are reported to have gained the upper hand in Moscow. M. Kerensky, General Alexieff, and General Korniloff are staying at military headquarters.

GULF OF FINLAND.

Swedish newspapers deny that the Germans have landed in the Gulf of Finland.

PALESTINE.

THE BRITISH PURSUIT.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

It is officially reported that General Allenby's advance was continued on Saturday on the left wing in the neighbourhood of Esdud, the ancient name of which is Ashdod. The enemy's rearguard had occupied a line along the northern branch of the Wadi Sukerier. The Royal Flying Corps effectively bombarded Wadi Surar Junction, rolling stock, and station buildings.

Our mounted troops on Friday captured five 5.9 howitzers, eight field guns, and 710 prisoners. As the battlefield is 600 square miles, the list of booty is incomplete.

The Warwickshire and Worcestershire Yeomanry on Thursday, near Huj, in the face of heavy gun, machine-gun, and rifle fire, charged with the greatest gallantry and dash. A large body of the enemy were captured, also twelve guns. They killed and wounded the Austrian gunners and took one hundred prisoners.

Mr. Massey, telegraphing from Gaza, says: The enemy continues his retirement We are pressing him hard. The Turks now are surrendering freely.

Eltineh Junction, upon the Jerusalem railway, is burning as the result of a heavy shell blowing up an ammunition train standing at the station.

We have already taken 5000 prisoners and 60 guns, with thousands of shells and millions of cartridges.

Our armies are in the highest spirits.

The Turks, harried by our ceaseless pursuit on a wide front, are preparing to leave further important positions.

The Australians on Friday captured 13 guns.

AMERICA'S PART.

BIG AIR PROGRAMME.

A Washington message says an army of skilled workmen will accompany military airmen to France, ensuring the excellent maintenance of the air service. Plans already are maturing for a double aeroplane programme, furnishing 50,000 machines and 100,000 engines. The present programme is proceeding excellently.

GERMAN WAR EFFORT.

CALLING UP MAN POWER.

The "Daily Telegraph's" Rotterdam correspondent states that Hindenburg and Ludendorff are scheming vigorously for the prosecution of the war. They are indifferent to controversies raging over the shuffling of Government offices. Their schemes are coupled with a great winter effort to increase the output of war material.

Hindenburg is initiating a further development of man-power. Local authorities in Austria and Germany are now empowered to call up men between the ages of 17 and 60, thus completely overhauling the remaining man-power. Attempts at evasion of service are punishable by six months' imprisonment or a fine of 10,000 marks.

A Copenhagen message says that the leaders of the principal parties in the Reichstag profess to believe that if the new Government secures a settlement of the political crisis the majority of the parties have agreed upon a programme which will be followed until the end of the war, and that the Parliament and Government will no longer be antagonistic, and German parliamentarism will be an accomplished fact. Herr Kuehlmann has officially notified the leaders of the solution of the crisis.

SINN FEIN.

A PROHIBITED MEETING.

Large contingents of police and soldiers arrived at Waterford on Saturday, to enforce the prohibition against the Sinn Fein meeting. Mr. de Valera and Mr. Griffiths arrived in the evening from Dublin. Crowds of local volunteers, boy scouts, and members of the Sinn Fein Club welcomed them, loudly cheering their leaders. A procession was formed, many carrying thick sticks.

The police prevented a group of Redmondites from rushing Mr. de Valera in the procession. Cordons of police, and soldiers with fixed bayonets, were posted at various points of the city. The leaders reached the hotel safely.

The meeting was held secretly, during a rainstorm, in the afternoon, three miles outside the city. Six hundred Irish volunteers attended. They outwitted the police by taking various routes. There were only ten policemen at the meeting. Mr. de Valera, in a characteristic speech, said they only wanted arms to make Ireland free.

BOLO PASHA'S GUILT.

A Paris message says a new witness, whose identity is not disclosed, proves conclusively Bolo Pasha's dealings with Germany. Bolo gave the witness £1200 to go to America, fearing his presence, because the witness had knowledge of his transactions.

ITALY

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

AN ENEMY CHECK.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

An Italian official report says: In the neighbourhood of Asiago the enemy captured advance posts at Gallio and Monte Ferragh. We subsequently expelled them, taking 100 prisoners. We captured an enemy vanguard at Tezze, in the Sugana Valley.

We repulsed the enemy on the Val Dobbiadene heights, and crossed to the right bank of the Piave. We destroyed Vidor Bridge.

A German official message issued on Sunday stated: Strong bodies of Italians attacked and pressed back our forces near Asiago. We captured Belluno.

The enemy made a stand on the Lower Piave.

We captured the stubbornly-defended bridgehead at Vidor.

Mr. Percival Gibbon, the war correspondent, in concluding a review of the situation, regrets that he cannot indicate the location of the line it is intended to defend, nor the consequence of failure there, otherwise the world would realise exactly the stakes which are being fought for. Italy literally is fighting for her life.

Other correspondents believe the Italians cannot long hold the Piave line. The capture of the important town of Belluno and the rapid progress of the enemy in Sugano Valley tend to inspire anxiety.

The Paris "Temps" says that General Fayelle will command the Franco-British contingents in Italy.

Mr. Lloyd George has reached the south of France on his return from Italy.

General Foch will remain in Italy for some time.

M. Painleve, the French Premier, on his return, convened a meeting of his colleagues, and detailed to them the Anglo-French measures to assist Italy. The statement has produced a reassuring impression.

M. Painleve is confident that, notwithstanding the gravity and strength of the blow, Italy's perils will be surmounted.

KING'S STIRRING APPEAL.

A Rome message says that the King of Italy received thousands of birthday greetings. The occasion resulted in a renewed outburst of loyalty.

"The enemy, favoured by extraordinary circumstances, has been able to concentrate all his strength against us. The Austrian army, which during 30 months of heroic fighting has been many times engaged and beaten, has now received the assistance which had been for long invoked. Reinforced by numerous war-seasoned Germans, our defence was obliged to retreat. To-day the enemy invades the glorious Venetian land, from which he was driven by the indomitable heroism of our fathers. Since Italy proclaimed her unity and independence she has never been confronted with such a great danger.

"My house and people have never wavered in face of danger, and shall confront this adversity with a virile and intrepid spirit. The citizens will respond to this new and decisive appeal with still greater faith and sacrifice. The soldiers will again stand shoulder to shoulder, bound with the Allies in the brotherhood of solidarity. Let the nation form one great army. Cowardice, discord, and recriminations are treason. May my cry to the nation, in face of the enemy, who counts more upon our moral breakdown than military victory, result in our defiant answer, 'We are ready to give all for Italy's victory and honour.'"

DEFENDING ITALIAN SOIL.

Mr. Percival Gibbon writes: The Tagliamento served Italy badly. When the Italians were retreating the river was a rushing torrent; when enemy cavalry approached the river subsided, and became a normal rivulet in a tract of sand.

The Italian retirement was glorified by a score of fine fights by rearguards, bringing the pursuers to a standstill again and again. Bersaglieri, who were fighting and marching continuously for a fortnight, put up a great resistance at Sacile, where there was house-to-house fighting. The fact that they are now fighting in their own beautiful country has fired the Italians with a new and terrible enthusiasm.

The troops, to whose defection General Cadorna attributed the disaster of October 24, were then in Austrian territory. Now they are fighting on Italian soil, and yielding by inches.

The moment will soon arrive when the heroism of these armies will be supplemented by the weight and fresh power of the Allied troops. The effect upon the Italians will be incalculable.

An Italian semi-official report states: The Fourth Division has magnificently contributed towards the defensive resistance since the Third Army retired on the Isonzo. They protected the retreat, and faced the enemy in over one hundred engagements, continually breaking impetuous attacks, designed to cut off the Italian rearguards' retreat.

EMPEROR'S ESCAPE.

An Amsterdam message states that while the Emperor of Austria was crossing a stream near the Isonzo his motor car was swept away. The Emperor was with difficulty rescued, none the worse for the adventure.

ALLIED CO-ORDINATION.

COMPLETE CONFIDENCE.

The London "Observer" says that the direction of the vastly extended Allied front will involve an important rearrangement of military commands.

A Paris message says the Supreme War Council of the Entente Powers, which will co-ordinate the political and military actions of the Allies, will sit at Versailles.

Paris reports state that Mr. Lloyd George and M. Venizelos (Premier of Greece) arrived within ten minutes of each other. They were met by some notables. The French Premier (M. Painleve), who has returned, said: "An absolute agreement exists between England, France and Italy," adding, "The Allied Conference is completely confident."

EAST AFRICA.

BRITISH PROGRESS.

It is officially reported that between October 23 and November 8, the British, south-eastward of Mahenge, drove the enemy eastward, and captured 142 Germans and 140 Askaris. The enemy evacuated Mgangira, and are now retreating towards Liwale. Our advance continues in the Lukeledi Valley. The enemy abandoned material, including a naval four-inch gun.

ANTI-GERMAN LEAGUE.

Mr. Havelock Wilson is forming a Merchant Seamen's League, open to every citizen of the Empire, with a minimum subscription of 1s a year, members being pledged to a refusal to employ Germans or purchase or use German goods for two years after the war. Mr. Wilson is hopeful of securing five million subscribers.

DESPERATE BATTLE

BRITISH GAIN

PASSCHENDAELE RIDGE

LONDON, Nov. 12.

Mr. Philip Gibbs says the German resistance on Saturday was more desperate than the battle for Passchendaele. The Germans used all their batteries for miles around, concentrating the most deadly fire on the outer lines and Passchendaele heights. The British traversed the storm of shells, and killed many Germans, taking few prisoners, owing to the stubbornness of the resistance.

The English, Irish, and Canadian attack on Saturday succeeded in widening our defensive positions upon Passchendaele ridge and driving the enemy further down on the far side. The weather was dismal, and there was hard fighting among the blockhouses all day long in a driving rainstorm.

The enemy had regrouped his guns since our capture of the crest. His artillery fire answering our barrage on Saturday was violent and tremendous. Infantrymen declare they have seen nothing like it during the previous attacks. It was a frightful spectacle, and they marvel at their escape from such a hurricane of high explosives. We reached the enemy's "pillboxes," where some of the Germans fought at close quarters.

The Canadians, upon the right, were in better ground than the English, who were lower, and had a hard time up the slopes against the blockhouses, fiercely resisting numerous counter-attacks from the direction of Westroosbeck, which drove back some of our outposts. Heavy shelling, coupled with the difficulty of holding the defensive flank, compelled the Canadians later to withdraw from some of the foremost positions, but the key to the position at Passchendaele and the neighbourhood is securely held.

The Canadians had an anxious time during six sleepless days and nights. They went forward gallantly and grimly, determined to take the crest at all costs. The Commander says the men were fine.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at midnight on Sunday, stated: We repulsed with loss a raid westward of Lens. The organisation of the ground captured on Saturday continues. Aviation was restricted on Saturday owing to the rain.

Sir Douglas Haig, reporting at midday, stated: Heavy rain is falling. There is hostile artillery fire upon our positions in Passchendaele and on the ground captured to the northward of the village. There has been no infantry action.

GERMAN STATEMENT.

German official reports state: The English five times attacked the craterland between Poelcapelle and Passchendaele. They penetrated the centre, but were thrown out with heavy losses.

An English local attack north-westward of Passchendaele sanguinarily collapsed.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communique on Sunday after noon stated: There has been incessant reciprocal artillery fire in Chaume Wood.

After lively artillery preparation the Germans attacked at Hartmannsweiler (Vosges). After a violent hand-to-hand engagement we completely repulsed the enemy, who momentarily gained a footing in our lookout line. Another enemy attack at Reichacker failed.

The latest French communique states: There has been a pretty lively artillery struggle in Belgium in the Papegoed sector, also on the right bank of the Meuse, in the region of Hill 344, and at Chaume Wood.

DOCKS BOMBED.

The Admiralty announces that the air service bombed St. Denis Westrem and the Bruges Docks on Friday night, and the aviators dropped large quantities of explosives with good results, causing a fire on Bruges Docks. All of our men returned.

TRAMWAY UNION.

RE-REGISTRATION APPLICATION.

INTERESTING ARGUMENT.

Great interest was manifested in the sitting of the first Full Industrial Arbitration Court yesterday, the Bench being occupied by Mr. Justice Heydon, Judge Rolin, and Judge Curlewis. Three old unions, whose registrations had been cancelled owing to their participation in the recent strike, applied to the Court for re-registration. These unions were the New South Wales Government Tramway Employees' Union, the New South Wales Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association, and the Sydney Coal Lumpers' Union. The fourth application was for the registration of a new organisation known as the United Crown and Railway Service Association. To the last application over 40 objections have been lodged by trades unions who are opposed to the registration of this union.

The Court first considered the application of the old Tramway Employees' Union for re-registration. Mr. A. C. Warton, secretary of the union, appeared in support of its application. Mr. J. R. Moffatt, representing the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association, appeared to consent to the application. Mr. T. R. Bavin and Mr. A. V. Maxwell, instructed by Mr. Vero Read (Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co.), opposed on behalf of the Tramway Traffic Association, and also for the Electrical Branch Workers' Association. Mr. F. W. Bretnall, for the Railway and Tramway Commissioners, also opposed.

In support of the application, the affidavit of Alfred Charles Warton was read. This stated, inter alia, that deponent had held the position of general secretary of the applicant union for 17 years. On December 31 last the membership was about 5500, of men who were employed in the Tramway Department in city, suburban, and country depots. The union's registration was cancelled about August 22 last, on the application of the Railway Commissioners. The Tramway Union was not a party in a letter written to the Commissioners stating that the whole of the unionists would cease work if the card system recently introduced was not withdrawn. On August 2 a number of the employees at Randwick workshops ceased work. These included a number of members of the union. Since the strike had been declared off, the executive, which held office during the strike, and which was responsible for the resolution calling the members out, had been retired from office, and new executive officers appointed. The new executive had made certain rules, by which if any officer of the union wilfully committed a breach of the rules, his office should become vacant, and he should be ineligible for nomination to any office for not less than 12 months. The union now respectfully submitted to the Court that it had endeavoured, to the best of its judgment, to purge itself of offence. Profiting by its experience, it had taken steps to provide against future abuse of authority, and it now threw itself upon the clemency of the Court, praying that restoration to the register of industrial unions might be granted.

A counter-affidavit by Fred. W. Bretnall, stated that practically the whole of the unions, including the applicant union, favoured a "stop work" resolution carried by the Labour Council in connection with the card system.

At this stage Mr. Justice Heydon asked what was there to show that, if the new executive of the union asked the men to come out again, they would not do so. Supposing the executive had ordered the men to murder the Acting Premier, it might be taken that the men would have destroyed the executive. But they broke the law when their officers ordered them to strike. What was there to show that their conduct would be different in the future?

Mr. Warton admitted that the executive officers had failed in their duty.

His Honor: Would the executive have been changed if the strike had been successful? Did they fail in their duty because they failed in their attack?

Mr. Warton: The men accepted the orders of the executive, though these orders were illegal. The union gave way under strong pressure and joined in the strike.

Mr. Warton then gave evidence, and was examined by Mr. Bavin. He said that the old executive of the union had retired voluntarily, in recognition of the fact that it had broken the regulations of the union.

Mr. Bavin: Have not you given it out to the workers that the old executive retired because its members were not re-employed?

Witness: Yes.

Referring to the issue of buttons, Mr. Bavin asked if a certain class of buttons known as "Lilywhites" were not given to the men who went out at the start of the strike and stayed out till its finish.

Mr. Justice Heydon: "The White Flower of a blameless life."

Mr. Bavin further alleged that some members of the union who did not come out were known as "All Blacks," and that the men who came out and went back to work were called "Magpies." The witness said he heard that the "Lilywhite" buttons had been sold, but he made no admission about the others. Respecting the officers, it was provided that only members who were financial on August 6 were eligible for salaried positions. This would have the effect of excluding men who came in after the strike.

Mr. Warton said that he acted on the Strike Defence Committee till he went to Melbourne to try to bring about a settlement. He did not go to raise money, but to interview the Prime Minister so that he might intervene in the strike. He went to Melbourne by train as the seamen had gone on strike. Mr. Willis had asked witness to try to keep the Wonthaggi men from striking.

Mr. Bavin: Does not your union take considerable interest in politics, and spend money in the support of individual candidates?

Witness: Yes. About £100.

Mr. Justice Heydon: Is this legal?

Witness: It is decided by a ballot of members.

His Honor: This is a very serious matter. You have rules, and then, by taking a ballot, you go outside these rules, which then afford no guarantee.

Judge Curlewis: Is this Court to register a union which departs from its rules?

Mr. Justice Heydon, referring to the old executive, said it received at a meeting a vote of confidence, although it had broken the rules. The only explanation was that a lot of strangers had got in and voted.

Mr. Warton then retired from the box. He addressed the Court, and admitted that the union had committed an offence against the law. He did not wish to gloss over or excuse that offence. The executive which was responsible had retired. He asked the Bench to consider the atmosphere and surroundings of the case. The union had been properly punished, but a new executive had now been elected. The union had not been consulted by other organisations as to the strike, to which it was opposed.

Judge Rolin: But you took a leading part in the strike.

Mr. Warton: If I did so it was to aim at a settlement.

At this stage the hearing was adjourned till to-day.

FIRE IN WORKHOUSE.

FIFTEEN LIVES LOST.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

Fifteen women were burnt to death in the Manchester Workhouse Infirmary. A fire broke out in a bathroom, and spread rapidly through the wooden building. Nineteen beds had been removed when the roof collapsed.

DUTCH NEUTRALITY.

AGREEMENTS WITH GERMANY

The publication will be made on Tuesday of a White Paper giving the Anglo-Dutch correspondence over the gravel question. It shows that the Dutch Government not only contended that the gravel transmitted was not intended for military purposes, but that the Rhine Convention and other agreements impos on Holland an obligation to guarantee free navigation of the waters lying between the Rhine and Belgium.

Mr. Balfour disputes the applicability of the agreements quoted, and asks if Holland regards these agreements as preventing the enforcement of her obligations as a neutral, also on what ground she claimed to prevent the departure of German ships captured in Antwerp by the Belgians.

LATE WAR NEWS.

ITALY'S NEXT LINE.

THE SUPREME NEED.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

Mr. Ward Price states that the Italian army is practically established upon its next river line. The first Austrian shells already are falling in the neighbourhood of the positions where the next great defensive battle will be fought. The supreme need now is for the Allied plans to be carried out with the utmost energy and speed.

According to a Paris report it is understood that it has been arranged that the Anglo-French assistance to Italy shall be equally divided.

A Rome message reports a growing movement in favour of more complete mobilisation, and the closing of theatres. The first batches of permanently disabled soldiers have gone to the front to encourage the fighters.

Our newspapers note with pleasure that the Prince of Wales is cordially welcomed in the villages, wherever he is seen. He walks in the streets without escort. His presence in Italy at this time of crisis is regarded as proof of England's warmest sympathy.

FATE OF BELGIUM.

TRUCULENT TIRPITZ.

An Amsterdam message says Admiral von Tirpitz, speaking at Munich, stated that the war would decide whether Germany or Britain would exercise a protectorate over Belgium. Germany would gain military safety and economic compensation in Belgium. "We can hold out longer than the enemy," he added.

GERMAN PEACE PROJECTS.

Paris newspapers urge the Allied Governments to prepare for German peace moves, following upon her successes in Italy.

Intrigues are increasing in Vatican circles. The Pope is summoning the principal prelates to Rome, in the hope of gaining their support for future pacifist overtures.

It is reported that Austrian officers encouraged the men forward, promising to obtain peace at Venice.

GREEK ENTHUSIASM.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

A Paris message says M. Venizelos explains that his visit to France is to obtain Anglo-French co-operation to organise the whole of the Greek resources, with a view to prompt action by the side of the Allies. The Greek troops were never so enthusiastic, and recruiting is proceeding excellently.

FOOD ECONOMY.

Sir Arthur Yapp (Director of Food Economy) at Manchester to-day announces the new scale of voluntary rations, which are graded according to occupation and sex.

LABOUR AND THE WAR.

The South Wales miners by ballot overwhelmingly rejected the strike proposal suggested as a protest against more stringent recruiting of miners. This is regarded as a notable proof of labour's determination to make any sacrifice necessary for victory.

WAR NOTES.

RUSSIA AND ITALY.

The outlook in Russia and Italy, as indicated by the cablegrams this morning, is a little less galvanising. The news from Russia is better, not because it contains any promise of an improvement in the unsatisfactory condition of affairs which has existed since the revolution, but because it holds out the hope that the threatened withdrawal of the armies in the east might be avoided. It is only a hope, however, and, until we have some definite indication that the extremists in Petrograd are no longer likely to effect a separate peace, it is doubtful whether even the passive resistance of the Russians can be regarded as a permanent factor in connection with the war. Russia's future, therefore, is still a closed book. As far as Italy is concerned, the resistance which she has offered on the Trentino front may be taken as a hopeful sign. The line on which her armies at present stand, however, is not as strong as it might be, and a continuance of the withdrawal in the near future would not be entirely unexpected. When the enemy is eventually held in Italy the task of winning back the lost ground will be one which must be attended with the gravest difficulties, and anyone who expects some sudden blow, which might drive the Austro-Germans back to the lines from which they started, is bound to be disappointed. Even an Italian advance along the plain would have to be accompanied by a laborious campaign against the mountainous regions to the northward, which the Italians have just been forced to evacuate.

ITALIAN COUNTER-STROKE.

Some hopeful signs of a stiffening of the Italian defence are not lacking in either the Italian or enemy communiques published this morning. In the first place, definite steps appear to have been taken to relieve the pressure which the enemy was bringing to bear on the Italian left from the Trentino front. The enemy's drive from this direction was an obvious menace to the left and rear of the whole of the Italian armies withdrawing along the plain to the southward, and threatened the complete isolation of the troops from the mountainous frontier region to the north and north-east who are retreating down the valley of the Upper Piave. The messages which had been received during the week-end indicated clearly that the Italians would have to make a strenuous effort on the Trentino front if a greater disaster than that which had already overtaken Italy was to be averted. That effort has been made, and, although the Italian line may not yet be considered safe, it is possible that the counter-stroke on the Trentino will permit of the escape of most of the troops in the Upper Piave valley. If the enemy again fails to break through to the plain from the Trentino front, it will probably be due, as it was in May and June of last year, to the Italian pressure on his wings, and especially on his left in the Sugana valley, where the Italians still hold him back at Tezze, on the Austrian side of the frontier. The statement of the correspondents that the enemy is progressing in the Sugana valley is therefore rather serious if correct. The centre of the enemy's drive from the Trentino was evidently being pushed down in a south-easterly direction towards the valley of the Brenta. Asiago, which the enemy claimed yesterday to have captured, was probably the point of the salient which had been driven into the Italian line on the Trentino front. The move into Gallio, a little over two miles north-east of Asiago, was evidently an attempt to widen the salient, preparatory to striking down towards the Brenta near Valstagna, five and a half miles to the south-eastward. The Italians, while holding their ground near the Austrian left, counter-attacked near the centre and drove the enemy out of Gallio, narrowing down his salient and preventing for the time being a further extension of his success.

THE PIAVE LINE.

While this setback which the enemy has received on the Trentino front reduces the menace to the Italians in the Upper Piave valley from this direction, it is yet to be shown that the passage-way through which they are withdrawing will not be narrowed down as the result of a further enemy advance along the plain. In order to prevent this the Italians will have to delay the enemy along the line of the lower Piave. The Italians are now on the right or western bank of this stream from Vidor to the sea. Vidor is situated a few miles below the point where the Piave leaves the mountains. From this town to the sea the river follows a south-easterly direction, passing through a depression in a patch of high ground some six or seven miles south-east of Vidor, flowing across the plain in separate channels for a considerable distance, and merging into one channel in its lower reaches. The fact that the river follows a south-easterly direction suggests that the enemy will again direct his attention towards the Italian left in endeavouring to force this line as he did on the Isonzo and Tagliamento lines. If he could meet with the same success in the region of Vidor as he did near Pinzano, on the Tagliamento, his task of forcing a renewal of the Italian retreat would not be so difficult. The fact that the Piave flows south-east instead of almost due south, as does the Tagliamento, means that, even before a crossing is effected by the enemy, the Italian left is already well back from the right. The enemy's plan, up to now, has been to force back the Italian left and strike down towards the rear of the forces on the right towards the coast. If the Italians can prevent a crossing of the Piave on the left of their line across the plain, they may be able to hold the enemy up, but if a crossing is effected there, the whole line will no doubt have to be abandoned as was the Tagliamento line, and the troops on the right will not be able to lose much time in falling back if they are to defeat the enemy's aim to cut off their retreat. This fact evidently appeals to the correspondents who are not confident of the ability of the Italians to hold the line. It will, however, have served a purpose if it enables the Italians to delay the enemy's advance sufficiently to permit of the complete evacuation of the Italian salient between the right of the Austro-German armies on the plain and the Austrian forces on the Trentino front.

FURTHER PROGRESS IN PALESTINE.

The latest official report regarding the British operations in Palestine show that the advance continues satisfactorily, especially on the left near the coast, where a point has been reached almost due west of Jerusalem. These are not the troops which will be likely to enter the Holy City, and, as the British front in Palestine runs in a south-easterly direction from the coast inland, the forces on the centre astride the Beersheba-Jerusalem railway, and those on the right, following the Hebron road, are still some distance further south. The progress of these troops on the left near the coast is, however, probably more important than that of those who are moving on towards Jerusalem. It is evident that their present objective is the port of Jaffa, about 21 miles north of Esdud, Although the driving of the Turk from Jerusalem would be an event of world-wide interest, and would have a considerable effect upon the enemy, the capture of Jaffa would probably be of greater military importance, and would have a more marked effect upon the future operations in Palestine. While the troops are vigorously pressing the pursuit, and giving the enemy little opportunity to reform his broken units, the Royal Flying Corps is performing good work by further hampering his retreat and increasing the confusion on the roads and railway along which he is retiring. The Wadi Surar Junction, which has thus been bombarded from the air, is the point where the line to Jerusalem branches off to the eastward from the north-south railway. The Wadi Sukerier, mentioned in the official report, lies a little to the northward of Esdud, and the next few days should show whether the enemy rearguards along this watercourse will be able to retard the progress of the British left towards Jaffa, below which port a further Turkish defensive line is, however, almost certain to be met with.

THE REFERENDUM

PROPOSALS ANNOUNCED

Vital to Government's Existence

VOLUNTARISM TO CONTINUE

SHORTAGE TO BE MADE GOOD BY BALLOT

The Prime Minister, Mr. W. M. Hughes, in his speech at Bendigo last night, announced the Government's referendum proposals on the subject of compulsory service.

The terms of the proposal to which the electors of Australia are asked to agree are:—

1. Voluntary enlistment is to continue.

2. The number of reinforcements required is 7000 per month.

3. Compulsory reinforcements will be called up by ballot to the extent to which voluntary enlistment fails to supply this number.

4. The ballot will be from among single men only, between the ages of 20 and 44 years (including widowers and divorcees without children dependent upon them).

5. The following will be exempt:—

(a) Persons who are physically unfit for service.

(b) Judges of Federal and State courts and police, special, and Stipendiary magistrates.

(c) Ministers of religion.

(d) Persons whose employment in any particular industry is declared by the prescribed authority to be necessary for the supply of food and material essential for war.

(e) Persons whose religious belief does not allow them to bear arms; but this objection will only exempt them from combatant service.

(f) Persons the calling up of whom for military service would, because of their domestic circumstances or for any other reason, cause undue hardship to themselves or others dependent upon them.

6. The Government will prescribe the industries essential to the prosecution of the war and the national welfare of Australia, and a special tribunal will determine the amount of labour necessary for their effective operation.

7. Where a family is or has been represented in the Australian Imperial Force by the father or a son or by a brother one eligible son or brother (as the case may be) shall be exempt.

8. Eligible males of families represented at the front shall not be balloted for until after eligible males of families not so represented have been called up.

9. All ballots shall be so conducted that families will contribute as nearly as practicable pro rata, and that in no case shall the sole remaining eligible member of a family which is or has been so represented be called up for service. Males under the age of 20 will be exempt in addition to the one eligible male over that age.

10. In determining the pro rata contribution regard shall be had to all members of the family who have joined the Australian Imperial Force irrespective of age.

11. Ballots will be taken by the States on the basis of the proportional number of eligible persons in each State.

12. The tribunals for deciding exemptions will be constituted by magistrates specially appointed, and an appeal will lie to a Supreme Court judge.

Mr. Hughes, in the final sentence of his speech, said that the issue was vital to the existence of the Government.

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH.

GREAT MEETING.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

BENDIGO, Monday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) opened the conscription referendum campaign at the Lyric Theatre, Bendigo, to-night. Mr. Hughes, who was accompanied by the Minister for the Navy (Mr. Cook), the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce), the Minister for Repatriation (Senator Millen), the Minister for Works and Railways (Mr. Watt), and the Postmaster-General (Mr. Webster), left Melbourne by the noon train, and on arrival at Bendigo the Prime Minister received an enthusiastic reception at the railway station. Mr. Hughes and his party were driven to the Town Hall, the procession being headed by a brass band. Before an assemblage of several hundred citizens, the Mayor (Councillor R. Abbott) welcomed the visitors. Mr. Hughes made a speech in response.

The Lyric Theatre, which has a seating capacity of 2500, was crowded long before 8 o'clock. When the meeting began an orchestra played selections, and the gathering sang songs until the arrival of Mr. Hughes. An enthusiastic demonstration, lasting for a few minutes, greeted the Prime Minister as he stepped on to the platform, and the applause was general when he rose to address the large gathering.

The issue is to be made a vital one. This important announcements was not made until the end of the speech, when the Prime Minister declared, "I tell you plainly that the Government must have the power; it cannot govern the country without it, and will not attempt to do so."

Another interesting statement was that the Prime Minister was a member of the Imperial War Cabinet. Mr. Hughes mentioned this fact in dealing with the menace of the military situation. He reminded the audience in placing facts before them that he spoke not at hazard, but as a member of the Imperial War Cabinet, and as one to whom all the information at its disposal was communicated.

The Prime Minister spoke for about an hour and a half. His remarks were frequently applauded, and he was given an excellent hearing throughout. The audience listened with rapt attention to Mr. Hughes while he was outlining the proposals of the Ministry, on referring the troops at the front. And when he sat down he was cheered again and again by practically the whole of the audience. There were a few boo-hoos, but these were quickly drowned by an enthusiastic demonstration.

THE SPEECH.

Mr. Hughes said the campaign opened to-night raises issues vital not only to the very existence of the Commonwealth and the Empire, but to liberty and to civilisation. We are now in the fourth year of a war incomparably the greatest the world has ever seen. The number of nations involved, the methods of warfare followed, the awful ravages inflicted, the fury of the onslaught, and the issues at stake distinguish it from all other wars. It is a world war, a terrific life and death struggle between two great ideals, might and right, despotism and democratic government. The whole civilised world is involved. Although remote from the storm centre, the destiny of Australia hangs like that of France, Italy, Belgium, and Britain upon the result of the conflict. Three times have the electors of Australia been appealed to since the declaration of war in August, 1914. The election of September, 1914, returned a Parliament on the wave of a great spontaneous outburst of patriotism. The leaders of both parties vied with one another in their declara-

... of devotion to the cause for which Britain and the Allies drew the sword.

Every member returned to the 1914 Parliament was pledged to support the Empire "to the last man and the last shilling." Time found the war, which optimists had thought would have been over in a few months at most, still raging on. Its fury, so far from abating, waxed fiercer, while its range widened, nation after nation becoming involved.

I cannot now even outline the events that led up to the appeal to the Australian people on October 28, 1916, but it may be said that after over two years of war Germany, so far from being conquered, had given such fearful proofs of her tremendous power, her barbarity, and her ruthlessness, that it became evident that victory, upon which rested and still rests the hopes of democracy and civilisation could only be achieved after a great effort in which all the resources of the Empire and its Allies were marshalled. Australia was called upon to do her share. Voluntarism had been relied upon for service oversea, although for home defence it had been long abandoned. The voluntaryism which had done great things in the early days when the fires of patriotism, burning brightly in the hearts of our people, were not damped by the poisonous propaganda insidiously disseminated by certain sections in our midst, to whom I have often referred and to whom I shall refer again, who, if they are not in the pay of the enemy, nevertheless serve his interests faithfully—voluntaryism, I say, had proved itself inadequate to deal with a situation that daily became more and more menacing. I was then the leader of the United Labour party which had been pledged by Mr. Fisher to support the Empire "to the last man and the last shilling." Upon my return from Britain voluntary recruiting, having proved unsatisfactory and insufficient, I took the only course open to me, and referred the matter to the people themselves. The memories of that campaign will not easily be forgotten. There was an orgy of gross misrepresentation and of vile slanders. The fears, the passions, the ignorance, and the credulity of the citizens were appealed to by every device at the command of those who were determined that Australia should not honour her solemn pledges and fulfil her sacred duty to the Empire and to the cause of liberty.

AUSTRALIA'S BLACK DAY.

October 28, 1916, was a black day for Australia. It was a triumph for the unworthy, the selfish, and the treacherous in our midst. It was a triumph for that insidious propaganda that had been actively at work in every Allied country since the war began. It was a triumph for those reckless extremists who had captured the Labour organisations, and for those who stood behind them, under whose direction, indeed, they had schemed to enter and capture the industrial and political seats—citadels of labour. The defeat of the referendum by a narrow majority of 72,000 in a total vote of 2,300,000 on October 28 was hailed by Germany and the enemies of Britain everywhere with exultation. Our troops in the trenches were taunted by the enemy, "Australians, your comrades have deserted you." The defeat was interpreted by those sections amongst us who had led the campaign as a proof that Australia was war weary, that their campaign of lies and poisonous propaganda had done its work sufficiently, and not only misled the electors on this one question, but had sapped their loyalty to the Empire, and, believing that power would be shortly vested in their hands, and grown bold by success, they threw off their disguise and spoke openly, revealing to the electors the manner of men they were. They were doomed to a rude awakening on May 5. The electors, being loyal at heart, saw them as they were—reckless extremists, peace cranks, disloyalists, and pro-Germans—realising that they had been duped by cunning lies at the referendum, resolved to repair their error. The issues of the election were put plainly. The electors were invited to choose between two parties. The Nationalist party set out in the forefront of its platform that it stood openly and frankly for the Empire, that it stood for decisive victory, that it was against any peace that was not based upon a crushed German military despotism. It stood for the maintenance of the five Australian divisions at their full fighting strength. It pledged itself to do all things essential to the safety and welfare of Australia and the Empire, to put the prosecution of the war first, and to subordinate all other things to it. In one direction only did it limit the scope of its war policy. In declaring that policy at Bendigo on March 27 last, I said, "The Government accepts the verdict of the people as given on October 28 last. It will not enforce conscription either by regulation or statute during the life of the forthcoming Parliament. If, however, national safety demands it the question will be again referred to the people;" and, speaking later at Benalla, I said, "We shall not find a ready excuse or pretext for putting this question to the people, but we shall put it only if the tide of battle, which flows strongly for the Allies, turns against them. In that case we shall put it before the people."

The National Government was pledged to do all things necessary to help to win the war, but not to impose conscription by statute or regulation. If national safety made it imperative that compulsion should be resorted to, we said we would again refer it to the people. That was the contract we made with the electors. It was said by our opponents that, notwithstanding our pledge, we would introduce compulsion behind the backs of the people, or that at best we should immediately refer the matter to them. It was said we should not give voluntarism a fair show. Well, time and circumstances have completely falsified those predictions. We have not attempted to go behind the backs of the people. We have given voluntarism a fair trial, although our opponents have certainly not done so. We have not sought an excuse for bringing this question before the people, but have acted only when recent events created a situation so menacing that had the Government failed to act it would have proved itself not only inept but treacherous.

POSITION NEVER GRAVER.

The conditions of the pledge that I gave on behalf of the Government have been amply fulfilled. National safety emphatically demands that Australia shall do her duty, shall maintain her five divisions at effective strength, and in the face of the latest news of the internal conditions of Russia, of the Italian debacle, who is there who can say that the tide of battle has not turned against the Allies? I say with all the emphasis of which I am capable that never since the war began has the position been graver, not even before the Marne. We are now forced to face the possibilities—I use no stronger term, although the most recent events would seem to justify it—of not only the collapse of Russia, but also that of Italy. The last few days has seen the rout of the second Italian army, the retreat of the third army, the demoralisation among the troops, hundreds of thousands of prisoners and guns captured, the continued retreat of the whole Italian forces, and the probability of the imminent fall of Venice. We must face the facts. At present it seems that at best we cannot hope that for a very considerable time Italy, aided though she will be by the Allies, will be able to do more than to hold back the victorious legions and so save herself from being completely conquered.

THE MILITARY SITUATION.

Do the citizens of Australia fail to understand what menace there lies in the Russian situation, what the defeat of Italy would mean? Do they realise the inevitable consequences of the complete collapse of the Russian military resistance, even though it stop short of her formal withdrawal from the war? Can they fail to realise its effect upon the Western offensive of the Allies, upon the moral of the enemy, how it fans prospects of disintegration, makes for the indefinite prolongation of the war? Can they not understand the tremendous added responsibilities and strain upon the resources of the Empire that the Russian situation and the Italian debacle have created? The overthrow of Kerensky? The success of the Soviet, with its demands for immediate armistice and peace? And the Italian debacle cannot be ignored. They have created a situation that compels us to strip off our coats, gird up our loins, and fight for our lives. Fellow citizens, I tell you plainly you stand now in grave danger. I say to you that the succession of ominous events which have followed one upon the heels of another during the last fortnight, has changed a situation which, though our successes on the Western front seemed bright with promise, is now one that is black with portents of evil. Let me put the position before you in the light of the most recent cables from Russia and Italy; and, although I must not disclose such facts as would help the enemy, I think I am not only justified, but in the interests of the Commonwealth compelled, to say plainly what the actual position now is, for unless you know the facts, how can you give a proper verdict? And here I may remind you that I speak not at hazard, but as a member of the Imperial War Cabinet, and as one to whom all the information at its disposal is communicated.

THE PRESENT POSITION.

What is the present position? The Press cablegrams have made it clear that there is anarchy in Russia, that a revolutionary Government is in control, composed of just that type of men who tried recently to secure the reins of government in Australia, who were responsible for the recent strike, who are enemies of the Empire, who are playing the game of Germany in our midst. Dreamers, theorists, anarchists, pro-Germans are in control of the machinery of the Government of Russia. For the time being, at all events, the army is largely under their control. They demand an immediate armistice, an impossible peace. The army is paralysed, the country in a state of chaos; the German fleet is cruising unmolested within 200 miles of Petrograd. Putting it at its best, Russia as an effective factor in this great struggle is no longer to be counted on. Her power of offensive has, for the present, completely gone. The fall of Riga, the naval battles in its vicinity, all show that her power of even holding the enemy has been whittled away by a poisonous propaganda. Unless, therefore, a miracle takes place the position we have to face so far as Russia is concerned is that she has not only lost all power of offensive, but cannot hold the enemy if he determines to attack. That the moral of most of her army is deplorable. There is no discipline; troops abandon positions without fighting. Revolution, anarchy, madness is everywhere. The Soviet, a council of so-called workmen and soldiers, many of whom are neither entitled t[illegible] themselves workmen nor soldiers, and [illegible] self-elected, have seized the reins o[illegible]ment, and want an immediate armistic[illegible] peace, which the Allies cannot, dar[illegible] accept, as the main plank of their platf[illegible] as pro-German influence is rampant in the Soviet, and has been the directing influence of the revolution, and cause of the demoralisation of the army. The peace that will satisfy the Soviet will be completely satisfactory to Germany for the time being. The only alternative to the Soviet and its policy is civil war, which will see one section of the army and the nation fighting desperately with the other.

Whatever the ultimate issue of this internecine strife, it is clear that for all practical purposes, unless a miracle occurs, unless some Cromwell or Napoleon arises, the Allies cannot hope for much from Russia for many months, if at all.

THE RUSSIAN COLLAPSE.

Do you realise what the defence or paralysis of Russia means to the Allies, to the Empire, to Australia? Military experts tell us that the war will be decided on the Western front. Germany has at present, or had recently, about 2,500,000 troops on the Western front, and some 1,200,000 on the Russian front. The full force of the Allies concentrated on the Western front has been directed towards forcing the Germans back, or breaking through their lines and demoralising them by the fury and intensity of artillery and continuous infantry attacks. Although they have gained no great spectacular victories, there is no doubt that the British and French forces have succeeded in doing this very slowly, but nevertheless surely. We were pushing the legions of the enemy out of Flanders. Recently some notable successes had been gained in and around Ypres, in which our own gallant troops had gained fresh laurels. Provided that Russia could continue, if it did no more, to hold the 1,200,000 troops on the Eastern front, and the Italians compel the Austrians to muster all their forces to guard the mountain passes to the Trentino, there seemed no reason to doubt that next spring, with the assistance America would then be able to give, the effect of the tremendous pressure upon the thinning line of Germany would have been severely felt. Then, again, the efforts of the blockade of Germany by the Allied navies was now very rigorous, and an even more potent factor in breaking the moral of Germany would during this winter make its influence severely felt upon the German people, whom it had already reduced to great straits. Until a fortnight ago the position, notwithstanding the disorder in Russia, was distinctly favourable to the Allies, but in this short space of time the rushing tide of circumstances has completely changed it. The outlook which was distinctly favourable has now become most ominous. The collapse of Russia, if it proves complete, or civil war unless the Soviet is crushed, almost immediately would release many legions of the enemy now on the Russian front. Do you not realise what it would mean, if, say, a million of the enemy now on the Russian front were to reinforce the German divisions in France and Flanders? If the Allies are only able to force the enemy back step by step, how would it be if German legions are reinforced by another million men or two millions? If the Austrian forces are included, and their moral raised by the collapse of two of their most formidable opponents, who shall say what will then happen? The Germans may, by a supreme effort, even snatch victory, which seemed almost within our grasp, from our hands. At best they may indefinitely prolong the war. But let me take you a step farther. Suppose Russia withdraws from the war. We hope and believe she will not withdraw, but suppose she does, for anything is possible with the pro-German anarchistic Soviet in control of her destiny. Then we shall have to face a situation grave beyond the power of mere words to express. The withdrawal of Russia would release 1,200,000 men, who would be available for the Western front. America is rushing on the training of her men with all speed, but you cannot make an army in a day. It takes many months to train and transport an army of even a million men. The immediate withdrawal of Russia would—I do not say that this is probable, but who dare prophesy what may happen in Russia with the poisonous leaven working in their midst. Give the enemy a crushing superiority of numbers long before the power of America could make itself felt, and how will it fare with the British and French armies then? Even worse consequences than this would follow, for it would render the British blockade of Germany almost futile. You cannot blockade a continent with Russia out of the war. Her resources would be available to Germany. She could not be starved out; she would be free from all danger in her rear. What an enemy would then confront us! I hope and believe that fate has not these evils for us, but we ought not to shut our eyes to the fact that the sky is full of dark clouds. We must not let the outlook daunt us, but we must face facts, and be prepared to put forth our full strength.

THE ITALIAN DEBACLE.

Now let us turn from this brief review of the consequences that may follow from the latest development of the revolution in Russia and look at the Italian situation. The latest cables tell us that the Italians are in full retreat. They have not only failed to hold the enemy on the Tagliamento, but are being driven further south, at such a pace as to make it doubtful if Venice, that historic city whose name is inscribed in the heart of Italy, can be saved. And Venice taken, what then is the end? Consider for a moment the nature of the news that has fallen upon us like an avalanche. For two years and more the Italians have been developing their attack upon Austria, intending to fall upon Trieste and carry the war into the very heart of Austria. Only a few weeks ago General Cadorna's attack seemed likely to be crowned with complete success. The Italian armies fighting under extraordinary difficulties, step by step stormed the Austrian's strongest citadels. Trieste seemed within their grasp. Suddenly there falls a bolt from the blue. We hear that the Austrian armies, reinforced by only five and a half divisions of Germans, have swept the Italians back like broken sticks in a raging mountain torrent in three days over the ground that it took long laborious months to gain, until in less than a fortnight the Italians, driven headlong back and back, a quarter of a million taken prisoner, probably at least as many casualties and deserters, 2000 guns captured, until they who but a few days ago stood gazing upon Trieste with the eyes of conquerors, are in full retreat, and will hold themselves fortunate if they can save Italy. How was victory almost in the hands of Cadorna thus changed in the twinkling of an eye to defeat, retreat, and rout? Was it through the reinforcement of the Austrian forces by Germany? It was not. There are only five half divisions of Germans in the Austro-German armies. Was it through overwhelming superiority of numbers? It was not. Was it through some new and terrible device, some new poison gas, some novel and frightful engine of destruction? No, none of these things were responsible for the cause of victory almost in the hands of Cadorna being turned into defeat and headlong retreat. Treachery was the cause of the defeat of the second Italian army, which had been honeycombed by pro-German propaganda. They, upon whom Italy relied, betrayed her. Treachery. Mark that word, and apply it to our own circumstances. The agents of Germany within the gates of Italy, and not the valour of the German arms, brought about the Italian debacle. As it had been, and is in Russia and in every one of the Allied countries, it is in Italy an insidious propaganda, worming itself into the very fibres of the Italian people, playing upon their prejudices, their ignorance, fostering class hatred, using Italian socialism as a tool to destroy Italian liberty. A campaign of lies whispered in the ears of the people about Britain, about France, peace notes inspired from Berlin, all these had done their deadly work in Italy; and Cadorna, unsuspecting, believing, like a gallant soldier and a patriot, that he could rely upon the valour and patriotism of his men, refused the help the Allies tendered him, and, being betrayed, was defeated. What is to follow? Who can say? The grave national danger has apparently steadied the Italian people, and has consolidated all sections, including the socialists. He urged the army to stand firm, and all men to do their duty. Let us hope for the best, but the moral of a beaten army, no matter how patriotic or valorous, is not readily restored, especially when it is compelled to retreat rapidly. The Allies are hurrying to the rescue; they may be in time; but, suppose the effective Italian army in the field is destroyed; suppose Italy in the hands of the enemy, what will follow? A separate peace. I do not know whether the electors have realised what this would mean. If they do there is no sacrifice they will not make to avert the blow, or, if it fall, to strike to meet and bear down the inevitable consequences. We hope that the thin silver lining to the great dark clouds that now fill the horizon is the promise of a better day. We hope the Italian armies will stand firm, that with the Allied forces they will hold back the Austro-German legions and save Italy. We hope that Russia may yet shake herself free from the control of those who are leading her to destruction.

BURDEN OF ANGLO-SAXONS.

But one thing stands out clear in all the dark and menacing landscape. Italy will fight; France, that heroic nation, will stand fast to the end; but the brunt of the tremendous responsibilities of the war must fall upon the shoulders of the English-speaking peoples. The cause of liberty depends mainly upon America and the British Empire, and until America has organised her great resources civilisation looks to the British Empire to uphold its rights, and civilisation must not look in vain. Nor will she, for just as in the Napoleonic wars all the Allies, save Britain alone, one after another, fell beneath the crushing blows of Buonoparte, so, if the worst comes to the worst, history will repeat itself, but every man in the Empire must do his share; every dominion must play its part; Australia must do her share. We must keep our five divisions in France and our forces in Palestine and elsewhere up to their full fighting strength. To do this it is necessary to raise 7000 men a month. We cannot do with less. Voluntary recruiting has failed. Let me show the reasons for its failure and why it cannot succeed in this country. Let me show by reference to figures how far it has fallen short of what is necessary. The total number of recruits raised from January 1 to the end of October, inclusive, is 40,039, or an average of 4000 per month. The rate of recruiting has not been steady, and has fluctuated considerably. For example, for the first five months of the year, January to May, the total was 23,710, or an average of 4742 per month, while in September and October, as a result of the strike, it fell to 2610, or not much more than one half of the number for February or March.

WHY VOLUNTARYISM FAILED.

Now these figures are very suggestive. They tell their own story. Voluntary recruiting depends upon the patriotism of the people. Anything that damps the fires of patriotism, that saps the loyalty of the citizens, prejudices voluntary recruiting very seriously. Voluntaryism has failed. In Australia there are over 770,000 males between the ages of 20 and 44, the majority of whom are fit for service. Making liberal allowance for the medically unfit, there are over half a million eligibles between 20 and 44. In addition, there are about 68,000 eligibles between 18 and 20 years of age, of whom, say, 45,000 are fit; yet in the month of September the number of voluntary recruits was only 2460, and for the five months January 1 to May 31, 23,700.

The effect of this failure of voluntary recruiting has already made itself definitely felt. We have five divisions in France, but owing to the recent fighting and the fact that they were approaching the limit of exhaustion of the reserve, or sufficiently trained reinforcements of the A.I.F. in England, General Birdwood has been compelled to use one of the five divisions as a reserve for the other four. The decision has caused keen disappointment and strong feeling amongst the Australians comprising this division. And, quite apart from the gravity of the situation caused by the Russian collapse and the Italian debacle, the need for more reinforcements is then urgent and imperative. Voluntaryism has not failed for lack of men, nor because Australia is war weary, for with the exception of those families who have sent men to the front the people of Australia have not suffered from the war at all. No; voluntaryism has not failed for these reasons, but it has failed because of a systematic campaign of poisonous doctrines insidiously disseminated throughout the country, and those who were responsible for the defeat of the referendum on October 28, 1916, those who clamoured for voluntary recruiting, are responsible for its failure. The elections on May 5 last proved conclusively that Australia was loyal to the Empire, that it was enthusiastically in favour of a policy that would enable the Commonwealth to do its share; that it was against a premature peace; that it repudiated the pernicious doctrines preached by the men who had continued to control organised labour; that it regarded I.W.W.'ism with abhorrence; that it repudiated those disloyal sections in our midst who sought to sacrifice Australia and the Empire in order to serve what they considered to be the interests of Ireland. Australia, by giving the National Government the largest majority known in the history of the Commonwealth, proved its loyalty. In one respect, and one alone, I repeat, did it limit the Win-the-War Government. It decided to rely on voluntary enlistment for reinforcements, and through this chink in its armour the disloyal section of the community have ceaselessly endeavoured to hamstring the Government's efforts in regard to recruiting and to all other things. The recent strike, the most serious in the history of Australia, was the fruits of a deliberate conspiracy for this purpose. It was engineered by the same men who had driven out of the Labour movement every man who dared to put his country in the hour of its great peril before his party, and its mean and petty interests. It was supported by the I.W.W. and by Sinn Feiners, and by every disloyal section in Australia. A strike in time of war ought not to be entertained by citizens of a free country. Such a strike as that which had just passed—a strike which tied up shipping for weeks when shipping is the very life's blood of the Empire—is a heinous crime. The men boast that thousands of unionists are fighting at the front. Yes, thank God, they are, but they are not of the type that engineered the late strike. I do not speak of the unfortunate rank and file of unionists, but of those reckless and disloyal men who have led unionism to political and industrial destruction.

SINN FEIN AND THE WAR.

And then there is that other sinister and disloyal movement, which, long working beneath the surface, has now dared to raise its head to openly avow its hatred to Britain and to the Empire. The Sinn Fein is here in our midst—the Sinn Fein whose present avowed object is an Irish Republic, independent of and outside the Empire. And Australians have been told lately that they are Sinn Feiners. What a vile insult to hurl at the loyal Australians. Three hundred and fourteen thousand Australians have gone forth to do battle for the Empire. The sands of Gallipoli and the fields of France and Palestine are dyed with the blood of these heroic men, who have given their lives for the Empire, because they believed that in fighting for the Empire they were fighting for Australia and the cause of liberty. Sinn Fein declares that every man who wears the King's uniform is a traitor. Your Australians are told that they are Sinn Feiners. Australia is an integral part of the British Empire. Its safety is wrapped up in and dependent upon that of the Empire. It glories in the fact that it is one of that league of free nations that make up the Empire; but Sinn Fein hates the British Empire, seeks its destruction, gloats over every success by Germany, seeks Germany's aid to strike a blow at the Empire while it is fighting for its existence. Voluntary recruiting has failed, and Sinn Fein which shrieks for liberty and takes German gold to do Germany's dirty work, which is the paid tool of the great enemy of liberty. Sinn Fein, and those other sections of which I spoke, have killed it. The Government has kept its pledge to the letter, and in the spirit. It spent money lavishly in its endeavours to secure recruits. It gave voluntarism every opportunity, carefully refrained from ever referring to the possibilities of an alternative. Voluntarism has failed. Syndicalism, I.W.W.-ism, and Sinn Fein have killed it; but Australia is loyal, and these sections do not represent her. We are faced now with a situation which makes the reinforcement of our divisions an imperative duty. Voluntarism has failed, but Australia must not do so. The Government elected on a win-the-war policy confronted with a situation that makes the reinforcement of our armies vital to our existence, and to that of the Empire, comes before the people, and declares plainly that it cannot give effect to a win-the-war policy unless it is clothed by the electors with power to act as the circumstances demand.

NEED FOR GREATER POWER.

Fellow citizens, it is useless to palter with this matter. You cannot have liberty unless you pay the price. You cannot remain a free nation unless you yourselves strike a blow for freedom. Voluntaryism, which leaves to some the duty which should be performed by all, which leaves the unworthy, the disloyal, to reap the benefits of the valour and sacrifice of the brave and patriotic, has, after three years of war, broken down hopelessly, and in the face of this imminent danger that now confronts the Commonwealth it must be abandoned. Every free nation that is fighting this great battle for liberty against military despotism has abandoned voluntaryism since the last referendum. America, that new and great Republic, where the free institutions of our ancient race have taken form and root, has adopted compulsion; Canada, our great sister dominion, has adopted it; Britain, France, Italy, Servia, New Zealand have adopted it; we only amongst the nations cling fatuously to a sinking and rotten hulk.

Citizens of Australia, from whose loins have sprung the glorious Anzacs, whose names shine throughout the world as a synonym of heroic valour—you who, on May 5 last, demonstrated your loyalty and your stern resolve to fight this battle to the end, will you now, when Australia—this land of liberty we love so well, this land for which the men of Gallipoli, of Pozieres, of Mouquet Farm, died—when the Empire upon whose safety our existence depends is in grave danger, will you hesitate to do your duty as free men and women?

THE MINISTRY'S RECORD.

The Government, elected on a win-the-war policy, definitely pledged to aid the Empire to the uttermost of its power, has endeavoured to give effect to the policy that it laid before the electors. It was elected on May 5. The Parliament met on June 14, 1917, yet, hampered as it has been by the strike and other things, in the short time that has elapsed since the election, it can show a record of good work done. We pledged ourselves to assist the returned soldiers in every way, and to this end a new portfolio was created, and a Minister for Repatriation was appointed to the Cabinet. The sole function of this Minister is the devising and perfecting of a scheme of repatriation that will ensure the settlement of every soldier in some form of suitable occupation. The Government is sparing neither money nor effort to fulfil our sacred obligation to the men who have fought for their country. The welfare of Australia depends upon the disposal of her products oversea. In the present abnormal circumstances this raises many problems of a complex and difficult character. Markets have to be found for wool, wheat, and other products, and freight for the transport of such goods as can be disposed of to these markets. Since freight is extremely scarce, and is growing scarcer every day, it is obvious that it is necessary to make arrangements to finance the producer so that he would be able to carry on, although his products cannot be sold, or if sold cannot be transported oversea for want of shipping. This the National Government has done since it was elected. We have sold the entire wool clip of Australia to Britain on the same terms as last year. This transaction involves not less than £4,000,000. We have strained every nerve to secure tonnage and to despatch expeditiously to the United Kingdom the wheat already sold to Britain, and although the strike necessarily hampered us most seriously, we have managed to get cargoes away not much behind schedule time.

The Government will prescribe the industries essential to the prosecution of the war and the national welfare of Australia, and a special tribunal will determine the amount of labour necessary for their effective operation.

Where a family is or has been represented in the Australian Imperial force by the father or a son, or by a brother, one eligible son or brother (as the case may be) shall be exempt.

Eligibles, males of families, where, now, or have been represented at the front, shall not be ballotted for until after eligible males of families not so represented have been called up. All ballots shall be so conducted that families will contribute as nearly as practicable pro rata, and that in no case shall the sole remaining eligible member of a family which is or has been so represented be called up for service. Males under the age of 20 will be exempt in addition to the one eligible male over that age.

In determining the pro rata contribution, regard shall be had to all members of the family who have joined the Australian Imperial force irrespective of age.

Ballots will be taken by the States on the basis of the proportionate number of eligible persons in each State.

The tribunals for deciding exemptions will be constituted by magistrates specially appointed, and an appeal will lie to a Supreme Court Judge.

THE PROPOSAL EXPLAINED.

This is the Government's proposal. We ask the electors for power to raise by compulsory ballot the difference between the number of recruits raised by voluntary enlistment each month and 7000. Seven thousand is the maximum number. For example, if, in any one month there are 2500 voluntary recruits only 4500 will be called up by compulsory ballot. The total number of recruits volunteering and those ballotted for will not exceed 7000 in any month. Compulsion is confined to single men and widowers and divorcees between the ages of 20 and 44 without children dependent upon them. The Government will not exceed the limits of the authorities asked for, that is, it will not call up married men or any of the persons or classes exempt under its proposal.

Let me show now that the Government scheme is adequate to maintain our oversea forces at their effective strength. The Government Statistician states that there were on the 30th June, 1917, approximately 370,000 single men, widowers, and divorcees without children between the ages of 20 and 44 years. This estimate includes fit, doubtful, and unfit, as well as persons of enemy birth-place and of enemy parentage. Excluding those of enemy birth and parentage there remain approximately 200,000 single men, widowers, and divorcees between the ages of 20 and 44. We may fairly assume that at least one-half of these are fit for military service, which ensures nearly a two-years' supply of recruits. To these must be added the 45,000 of eligible males between 18 and 20, many of whom, although exempt under the Government proposal, may be expected to voluntarily enlist, and married men who may also do so. These will supplement the supply of those liable under the scheme very materially. The number of persons under 20 who have enlisted is estimated to be somewhere between 15 and 20 per cent. of the number of recruits. Assuming that voluntary enlistment secures an average of only 2000 a month, a much lower number than has been enrolled, the Government proposal will provide sufficient to carry us on for two and a half years. The Government is satisfied that after making all allowance for the unfit exemptions under the proposal, and the number necessary for carrying on the great industries of the country, there will remain a sufficient supply of recruits for over two years, from the date on which the men secured under the proposals are ready to take their places in the firing line. This cannot be earlier than next June, and probably two months later; so that under the Government proposal there are assured 7000 men a month for over two and a half years from the end of this year.

HOW THE BALLOT WILL OPERATE.

So much for the sufficiency of the scheme. I desire now to direct the attention of the electors to some of its important features. First, the eligible males of those families that have now or have had representatives at the front will not be liable to the ballot until those of other families not so represented have been called up, upon a pro rata basis. This is a sound and equitable principle, and one which the voluntary system violates. Why should some families make all the sacrifices and others none at all? Under this scheme we shall even things up, and thus treat all alike. It is high time we did. Then the scheme exempts one eligible male, that is a male person medically fit, and between the ages of 20 and 44 in each contributing family. It is important to note that males under 20 are not included, so that in a family of, say, four boys, two under 20 and two over, the only one liable to the ballot would be one of the two sons over 20.

EXEMPTIONS TO MAINTAIN INDUSTRY.

Now I come to another vitally important matter. I refer to the carrying on of the industries of the country, and particularly those necessary for the prosecution of the war. The rural industries, wool-growing, production of food, the transport trades, shipbuilding, etc., are all essential to the prosecution of the war. Under the Government scheme ample provision is made for these, and machinery created to ensure the exemption of the necessary labour.

The Government will decide what are the industries essential to the prosecution of, and relating to, the war, and a special tribunal will decide the number of men necessary for their effective operation. One point more. In the face of the reckless campaign of lies and misrepresentation that marked the last referendum campaign, and which contributed materially to its defeat, needs to be emphasised. The number of men called up under this scheme is considerably less than half of that asked for last year. It is less than one quarter of the number asked for for the September, 1916, quota, viz., 32,000. The number of males reaching 20 each year in this country is about 32,000; that is to say, that under this scheme the number required each year for reinforcements is only 42,000 more than the number which become available by the natural increase of population. It is obvious, therefore, that in any case the disturbance to industry will be slight, taking into consideration that under it the number of men required for the great industries necessary for the prosecution of the war will be assured by the Special Tribunal; that the men will not be called up before they are actually required; that if circumstances reduce the number of men required that only the actual number required to maintain our forces at their effective strength will be called up. I say, taking all these things into consideration, and the peril in which we and every part of the Empire now stands, the electors of Australia need not hesitate to vote for the Government proposal.

WHY THE NUMBER ASKED FOR IS LESS.

Why does the Government ask now for only 7000 men per month as against 16,500 at the last referendum? The explanation is simple and sufficient. Reinforcements are determined by the number of casualties. Our object now, as then, is to keep our oversea forces, the five divisions in France, and the troops in Palestine, and elsewhere, up to their full fighting strength; to keep the Australian units distinct, to preserve their identity, to prevent their absorption in other units through insufficiency of reinforcements. In September, 1916, when the British Army Council asked for 16,500 a month, the great offensive on the Somme was in progress, and the battle of Pozieres had just been fought. The casualties were very heavy, amounting to nearly 20,000 per month, consequently something approaching that number was necessary to reinforce them. But since then the Allied Generals have learned much; our methods are much improved, the curtain of fire behind which the troops advance to attack has been perfected, acting both as sword and shield, and casualties have very greatly decreased. It costs less than one-half as many men as formerly to take a given objective. General Birdwood, in the light of the experience of the whole of this year, has made a most careful estimate. General Legge, with his own experience to guide him, working on independent lines, has arrived at practically the same conclusion. The casualties now are such that 7000 men per month are sufficient to keep our forces up to their full fighting strength. That is the number we want. No new units have been formed, or are in process of formation. We ask the electors for authority to raise by compulsion the difference between the number obtained by voluntary means and 7000 a month—7000 is the maximum: we shall not exceed that number. The issue before the electors, therefore, is clear and distinct. The number of casualties demand that 7000 men per month shall be forthcoming under the voluntary system. We cannot rely on half that number being obtained. We ask for power to supplement the number raised by voluntary enlistment by compulsory ballot.

I said in the last campaign, and I repeat it now, that the deciding factor in this war will be the spirit of the people. War fought on such a vast scale, involving so many millions of people, can never be finally decided by physical force alone. The moral courage of the race, the soul of the nation, will be the final test. We are proud of this country and of the great race to which we belong. In this hour let us act as becomes free men, sprung from a stock nurtured at the breast of freedom, from men whose fathers stood firm, and undaunted when the nations of Europe bowed the knee to the conqueror. We are but a small nation, but we come of a great race. Thanks to the Anzacs we have earned the right to a great name. Let us do our duty, come what may. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder with the rest of the great British Empire, setting an example of calm and resolute courage that will inspire those who are wavering in Italy and Russia, with fresh heart to fight on for liberty. Let us prove that those who say that Australians are Sinn Feiners speak with a forked tongue. Let us prove to our soldiers in the trenches whose nerves are taut with years of heroic effort and indescribable hardship that we who owe so much to them are resolved to do our duty, and send them help, cost what it may. Fellow-electors, the Government proposal is before you. We who were elected on a "win-the-war" policy tell you plainly that the situation in Russia and Italy is such that without the power to ensure reinforcements we cannot give effect to the policy which you approved with such enthusiasm last May. I tell you plainly that the Government must have this power. It cannot govern the country without it, and will not attempt to do so.

A motion approving of the policy of the Government was carried unanimously amidst great cheering.

A REASONABLE SCHEME.

PROFESSOR MACINTYRE'S VIEWS.

"The scheme proceeds really on the voluntary system," said Professor Macintyre, chairman of the State Recruiting Committee, when interviewed last night in reference to the Government's conscription proposals. "Compulsion," he continued, "is only to be applied to complete that system. This is manifestly the best method to adopt. The limitation of the proposal to unmarried men was the line which I expected would be followed, and one can reasonably expect that that will see us to the end of the war.

"I am glad to learn that the ballot for men will be taken on the basis of the States. This should be easier to work than the fixing proportions for districts.

"If Australia is prepared to make the maintenance of her army the first call, then the scheme seems to me as reasonable as any such scheme could possibly be. There ought to be no difficulty in all who believe in maintaining our full strength uniting on the basis of such a scheme."

STATE MEMBERS' POSITION.

The State Cabinet will meet this morning, and while there are other matters to be discussed the Federal Government's conscription proposals, as outlined by the Prime Minister at Bendigo, will provide the main topic of discussion. Ministers who were questioned yesterday declined to discuss the position until they were made fully acquainted with the Federal Government's proposals.

A date will be fixed to-day for a meeting of the National party in order to discuss the position and the attitude of members generally towards the conscription campaign. It is explained that a date has not so far been decided upon for a meeting of the party on account of the absence in the country of a good many members.

The Premier, Mr. Holman, when seen last night in regard to Mr. Hughes's speech at Bendigo, said that, although he had been made acquainted with the main points of the Prime Minister's utterance, he would prefer to await the receipt of the complete report of the speech before venturing any opinion.

Owing to the delay which took place in the transmission of the complete report last night, it was not possible for Mr. Holman to peruse it in time to make a statement.

The conscription question will probably be the principal subject of discussion at the meeting of the Labour party on Wednesday.

CONSCRIPTION COMMITTEE'S APPROVAL.

The following statement was issued by the N.S.W. Conscription Committee last night:—

"The proposals outlined by the Prime Minister at Bendigo are limited to the barest necessities of the situation. It is clear that the voluntary system cannot fill the gaps in our Australian divisions. The proposals are limited to sending the reinforcements necessary to fill those gaps. They differ essentially from the proposals submitted at the last referendum, and practically the whole of the case which was set up against the previous proposals disappears.

"In the present grave position it is difficult to see how anyone can vote No, unless he is prepared to say that the gaps ought not to be filled.

"It is a matter for considerable satisfaction that the Government has announced, in unequivocal terms, that it will stand or fall by the result of the referendum. This announcement will do a great deal of good, as evidence of the Government's sincere conviction of the seriousness of the situation, and of the necessity for helping the Allies with men.

"The Conscription Committee is still firmly convinced that the proper course was to go to the country, but failing the adoption of this course the Government has taken the next best step in making the issue vital to its own existence.

"The committee will loyally carry out the assurance contained in the resolutions passed at the Town Hall meeting on Friday night, and will support in every way in its power the efforts which must now be made by all loyal citizens to secure a Yes vote. It will co-operate to the fullest extent with all organisations which favour conscription, and will give every assistance that may be required to the central Referendum Council, which will no doubt be forthwith established to carry on the campaign in New South Wales."

J. R. PEDEN, N.S.W. Conscription Committee, University chambers, Sydney.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S MEETING.

MR. HUGHES AT SYDNEY TOWN HALL.

The Prime Minister will arrive in Sydney to-morrow morning, and will address the opening meeting of the campaign in this State in the Town Hall to-morrow night. He will, it is understood, then return to Melbourne, and at an early date speak in Adelaide, leaving his meeting in Queensland for a later date.

Mr. Cook (Minister for the Navy) and Senator Millen (Minister for Repatriation) will accompany Mr. Hughes to Sydney, and will probably speak at the Town Hall meeting. Mr. Cook will also speak at Parramatta on Thursday night, and will address a series of meetings in this and the other States.

Mr. Hughes will be supported on the platform to-morrow night by practically all the New South Wales members of the Federal Parliamentary party, also some Queensland and Victorian members, who are at present in Sydney.

Tickets for early admission may be obtained at the offices of the National Association, 33-39 Hunter-street.

MR. TUDOR'S REPLY.

Mr. Evans, secretary to the Australian Labour party, stated last night that the anti-conscription committe had engaged the Protestant Hall for the 15th inst., when Mr. Tudor, M.P., and others will reply to the Prime Minister's proposals.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We receive numerous letters on the subject of the referendum. Our correspondents should take notice that under the Federal electoral law all such letters should, during the period of the referendum and up to the return of the writ, be signed with the full name and address of the writer.

THE FOOD ARGUMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—On the question as to whether we should send food or men to the front. Suppose we at once convert all our racecourses and sports grounds into farms and pastures, and engage our sports to plough and to sow, to reap and to mow, what then would we do with the produce? We should leave to commandeer our picture shows to use as granaries and storehouses till such times as our unions decide whether they will build our ships.

Again, only this morning in the tram I overheard a lady state, what difference will it make in the war for the few men Australia can send. She apparently knew nothing of the glorious deeds of our Anzacs, and of the subsequent reinforcements, or the great difference it would make to relieve those of our boys who have been in the trenches for two or three years without a break. Surely it is up to our sports, who toil not, to take a hand in this, the greatest game.

I am, etc., THOS. ROSS.

Waterloo, Nov. 12.

LIQUOR REFERENDUM.

NOISY TOWN HALL MEETING.

Practically every inch of space in the vestibule of the Sydney Town Hall was occupied yesterday afternoon when a public meeting, convened by the Lord Mayor (Alderman R. D. Meagher), in response to a requisition, assembled "for the purpose of urging the State Government to make provision for a vote of the people on a bare majority as to whether the liquor traffic should continue or not."

As a matter of fact, the meeting, by an overwhelming majority, decided that the issue should be postponed "until after the war."

The meeting was the noisiest held in the hall for many years. Indications of some such feeling were apparent even before the meeting actually commenced, and the Lord Mayor, who presided, anticipated possible developments by an appeal for "a fair, democratic hearing for all the speakers," as a consequence of the reading of the projected resolution arousing hostile shouts. The Lord Mayor indicated what he described as "shadows passing through my mind," such as his impression that the three-fifths majority was for the protection of vested interests, the issue of why the liquor trade should not be compensated when resumed, as was done in regard to other businesses, the feasibility and the success of "precipitating" people into a State in which there was no alcoholic liquor, and sociological aspects, upon which, he said, he was open to conviction on "an appeal to reason and not to sentiment."

Mr. F. H. Molesworth proposed the first resolution,—"That this meeting of business men and citizens of Sydney, realising the detrimental effect that the liquor traffic is exercising on national efficiency, repatriation, and the 'win-the-war' policy, urges the State Government to submit to the people of the State as a whole as to whether the liquor traffic should continue or not."

Deafening shouts of "No," with a few of "Yes," greeted the reading of the resolution, and thenceforward noisy interruption was continuous and frequently was prolonged for minutes. As the meeting progressed the demonstration and shouting in opposition to the resolution became stronger. Though the crowd did not at any time become physically riotous, it certainly did so vocally, so that the Lord Mayor, who had to intervene every few minutes, frequently had considerable difficulty in restoring sufficient order to enable the advocates to make their speeches. All the speakers in support of the resolution were similarly treated, and were several times counted out, but Mr. W. C. Clegg, acting president of the New South Wales Alliance, and Mr. James Marion, secretary of that organisation, had particularly tempestuous passages. At frequent intervals they could not be heard a few feet away.

The mover, the seconder (Mr. H. M. Hawkins), and Messrs. Clegg and Marion frequently urged the meeting to be not afraid of the referendum, and "to trust the people" to decide the issue. Especially as the principle was again being applied to conscription—and every reference to conscription aroused a noisy outburst and injunctions of "Don't mix the issues." Mr. Molesworth declared: "If the Government will remove the temptation of liquor from the paths of our boys I will undertake to raise 1000 soldiers free of cost." Mr. Marion urged that the referendum was necessary because "Parliament is susceptible to influences that the great mass of the people are not susceptible to."

An amendment was, when the meeting was about half through, handed to the Lord Mayor from Mr. J. T. Donnison, and it also aroused a demonstration. The amendment read: "In the opinion of this meeting it is undesirable at this period of the Empire crisis that the State should be divided into hostile camps on the liquor issue. All our energies should be devoted to winning the war, and should not be diverted from that object by questions likely to create keen political opinion. The matter of holding a referendum on the question of prohibition should, therefore, be postponed until after the war."

The silence whilst Mr. Donnison explained the reasons for his amendment was in striking contrast to the earlier noisiness, and was broken only at intervals by applause. The amendment being seconded by several from the body of the hall, but officially credited to Mr. Courtney, was carried by an overwhelming majority.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING.

VIGOROUS ADDRESSES.

The campaign in advocacy of a State referendum on a bare majority vote on the liquor question was continued at a large public meeting in the Town Hall last night, under the auspices of the New South Wales Alliance. The chair was occupied by Mr. Wm. C. Clegg, acting president of the Alliance, and the large assemblage on the platform included Archdeacon Boyce, the Revs. A. A. Yates, R. B. Reynolds, J. Burt, A. Deans, H. S. Begbie, A. Holliday, Nelson Howard, Captain-Chaplain Cranston, Colonel Birkenshaw, Dr. Short, Messrs. H. G. Harward, H. P. Walker, A. Grant, F. Reed, J. Greenstreet, H. M. Hawkins, F. H. Molesworth, Geo. Lewis, A. B. Millar (Melbourne), and J. H. Lister, M.P. (Vic.).

The chairman said that the one thing standing in the way of Australia doing its share in winning the war was the liquor traffic, and members of Parliament who stood in the way of the people getting rid of it were traitors to the Empire and the Commonwealth. They were going to tell Mr. Holman and his Government that if they did not give the people an opportunity to decide the question for themselves they would be given a test at the ballot-boxes. (Applause.)

The Rev. F. Lade, M.A., of Adelaide, moved the resolution of the evening:—"That, whereas the liquor traffic is a grave menace to the people of this State, and is the direct cause of individual and national inefficiency, preventing the nation putting forth its best efforts to win the war, and a menace to the welfare of returning sick and wounded soldiers, this meeting urges the State Government to submit to the people, on a bare majority vote, the question as to whether or not the traffic in intoxicants should be prohibited throughout the State. That, owing to the supreme and paramount importance of this matter, it urges the Government to deal with the same during the forthcoming session of the State Parliament to be held in January."

Mr. Lade said he could hardly realise that he was under the same roof as about three hours previously. "The enemy was breathing forth threatenings of slaughter and something else," he said. "We have reduced our opponents to a position of absolute bankruptcy as regards arguments. (Applause.) I say without fear of being challenged that there is nothing to-day that is perpetuating the existence of the liquor traffic but senseless custom and vested interests." He admitted they were formidable; it was difficult to overcome them. The patron saints of the liquor traffic were ignorance, greed, and boodle. It was an impertinence that forced itself on British civilisation. The Lord Mayor of Sydney had that afternoon suggested that there were two sides to the question. The speaker had yet to discover that there were two sides to it. A well-instructed public would mean the death-knell of the liquor traffic. The Lord Mayor had that afternoon said the appeal must be to reason, and not to sentiment. "Bless his innocent heart," declared the speaker amidst applause, "there is no occasion to rest on sentiment. I stand upon the ground of applied science, and will meet any of them."

Mr. A. B. Bruntnell, M.L.A., seconding the resolution, said it seemed doubtful if even the seriousness of the war was realised, seeing, for instance, that while young men were being urged to make the supreme sacrifice, the attendance at the Melbourne Cup was a record. Similarly, the terrible seriousness of the liquor traffic appeared not to be realised. The menace had been proved not by fiery enthusiasts, nor water-on-the brain fanatics, but by the leaders of the trade itself.

On the motion of Mr. B. J. Doe, M.L.A., seconded by Mr. Hoskins, M.L.A., it was decided to request the Premier to receive a deputation to put before him the resolution of that night.

A vote of thanks was accorded the Rev. F. Lade and other speakers.

During the meeting selections were played by the Petersham Salvation Army Silver Band.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the headquarters branch, New South Wales division, of the Red Cross Society was held at the Town Hall yesterday afternoon, Mr. J. O. Fairfax presiding. On the platform were Mr. J. J. Cohen, M.L.A. (Speaker of the Legislative Assembly), Mr. James Ashton, M.L.C., Mr. Hanbury Davies, Mr. Wilfred Docker (hon. treasurer), and Miss Mort, one of the joint hon. secretaries. Amongst those in the body of the hall were Lady Fairfax, Miss Fairfax, Mrs. Bottomley, Mrs. Pickburn, Mrs. Alfred Lee, Mrs. C. Bennett, Miss Consett Stephen, Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Stafford, Mrs. Victor Cohen, Mrs. Mackinnon, and Miss Ella Richards. Apologies were received from Mrs. George Lee, Mrs. James Ashton, Mrs. Laidley, and Miss Walker.

In moving the appointment of the general committee for 1917-18, the chairman said he proposed to say a few words about the present situation. As all must realise, it was one of gravity, and we must all acknowledge that it pointed to a longer war than at this time last year we all had hoped would be the case. However, it was our duty to face the position cheerfully, steadfastly, and with a renewed determination to do our duty. (Hear, hear.) They must see that the Red Cross did not fail in its work, because, after all, no matter what our difficulties might be, it was far easier for us than for our boys in the field and on our ships. (Applause.) "We must do," said the chairman, "as they are doing—stick it out; and to that end we must study economy and practise it wherever we are able. We must make our money go as far as we possibly can; we must keep on looking round to see where we can save money without sacrificing efficiency. Another thing we may keep in mind is this: Never buy where you can beg. Another point is: Never pay for labour where you can get it done voluntarily. If you, in your branches, are doubtful whether you are paying too much for your goods or services, ring up head office and find out if any other branch is doing better. The point is this: we do not want to spend our last shilling until we have assisted the last wounded man from the war." (Applause.)

Mr. Jas. Ashton, M.L.C., seconded the motion, and said that in a few days the members would be called upon to exercise the right they possessed of electing the executive. Upon that executive was laid the important duty of regulating the work of the Red Cross throughout the State, and in conjunction with the council of the Red Cross and the finance committee of the Australian branch, regulating the oversea expenditure with the assistance of the society's representatives abroad, as well as attending to the export of food-stuffs and clothing for our forces at the various fronts. This was the third election of a general committee, and on each preceding occasion the hope was expressed that before the next election came round the war would be ended. On each occasion, unfortunately, our hopes had been disappointed, and now, it was no exaggeration to say that the fog of the situation was apparently more impenetrable than ever. No man or woman could see the future, but there was one thing in the midst of this obscure outlook which was unmistakable, definite, and clear—that we had to make up our minds that our soldiers and sailors who were fighting for our Empire should not go uncared for—we must make up our minds to fight with greater determination, greater bulldog tenacity than we had done in the past, just as our soldiers and sailors would. (Applause.) "We must make up our minds to meet the increased demands that will be made upon us," said Mr. Ashton, "remembering that what we are prepared to do, what we are prepared to undertake in the way of duty, onerous as it may be, pales into insignificance when compared with the work done in the various parts of the Empire, in Europe, in Asia, in America, and in Africa. During next year we have two important duties cast upon us in addition to the ordinary work of the organisation. That work has been carried on for three years now, and is being carried on without any friction. All the parts of our organisation have settled down into their places. The work is a big one, but it will undoubtedly extend, and during the next half-year two special appeals will be made on behalf of the organisation. This must be done in order that the work of the future may be effectively carried on, and it will devolve upon the sympathisers with and supporters of the Red Cross to endeavour to make an extraordinary success of the collection which must come on such as was made in July, 1915, on Australia Day. It is too early at this stage to enter into the details of that great appeal, but there is another appeal which comes on much sooner than that—the appeal for 'Our Day.' That appeal will be made on the 30th of this month."

Mr. Ashton's remarks upon this subject are reported under the heading of "Our Day."

A vote of thanks to the chairman, proposed by Mr. J. J. Cohen, M.L.A., and seconded by Mr. Hanbury Davies, was carried.

The following members of the Divisional Headquarters' Branch were elected members of the general committee for 1917-1918:— Mrs. Arthur Allen, Mrs. Herbert Allen, Miss K. Austin, Mrs. G. W. Armstrong, Mrs. F. Aronson, Mrs. Forbes Angus, Mr. Jas. Ashton, M.L.C., Mrs. James Ashton, Mr. J. Sheddon Adam, Mrs. W. J. Adams, Mr. J. M. Atkinson, Mr. H. Y. Braddon, M.L.C., Mrs. G. W. ## THE TURF.

Entries for the A.J.C. Villiers Stakes and [illegible] Cup will close next Monday.

The stewards of the Rosehill Racing Club continued their inquiry yesterday into the riding of V. Coleman (Cordon Rouge), J. Henslow (Cavan Boy), and J. McEvoy (Stokham) in the Hurdle Race on Saturday. So far as Coleman was concerned, the stewards did not feel justified in taking any further action, as it was the horse's first race over hurdles; but they decided to recommend to the A.J.C. that Henslow's and McEvoy's licenses should be [illegible].

At Rosehill on Saturday the stewards suspended V. Lillyman (who rode Promised Land in the Granville Stakes) for the meeting in connection with a protest against that horse for interference with Varus, to whom the race was awarded. The stewards, after hearing further evidence yesterday, found that Lillyman had been guilty of foul riding within the meaning of rule 133, and disqualified him for a period of two years.

"Fairplay" (Ryde): Telegraphic error. Morrungong started at 4 to 1.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphs that the stewards concluded their inquiry into the running of Rael Locin in the Final Handicap at Flemington on Saturday, and they considered that Bullock did his best on the horse, and exonerated him from any blame. S. P. Casey, the trainer, was severely cautioned for not attending the inquiry at Flemington after he had been ordered to do so, and he was warned that if he offended again he would be severely dealt with.

Warwick Farm Racing Club has received 105 nominations for its meeting on Saturday, November 24. The six events closed as follows: Maiden Handicap, 47; Pace Welter, 52; Juvenile Handicap, 35; Warwick Handicap, 22; Farm Stakes, 26; and Jumpers' Flat Race, [illegible].

"S. M." (Newtown): The prices quoted in the "Herald" for the November Hurdle Race at Flemington on Thursday are correct. Obi started at 7 to 2 against and Lord Grey 9 to 2 against.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

Business was slow in all metal lines yesterday, except in agricultural implements and machinery, for which there was an exceptional demand. Prices for these commodities were unchanged. Twelve gauge barbed wire sold at £50. Fourteen gauge sold at £55. Fencing wire was selling in very limited quantities. Of wire-netting a little 18 gauge was sold at prices previously quoted. Iron wood screws sold at 25 per cent. on list price, and brass screws at 35 per cent. Galvanised piping was advanced to 15 per cent. on list for city delivery, and 17½ per cent on list for suburban delivery. Axe handles were up to 21/, an increase of 1/ on the previous quotation. Sheep shears were worth 85/. Files were 20 per cent. on list. Black powder cartridges sold at 13/9 per 100. Small sizes in rounds, squares, and flats of bar iron were advanced to £32 a ton. They were very scarce.

Oils were steady at late rates. Meggitt's Australian linseed sold at 6/5 and 6/7 for raw and boiled respectively in cases. Australian white lead sold at £75 a ton, in large quantities, and at 78/ per cwt. in distributing lots. American white lead was worth 83/ per cwt. Turpentine was firm at 5/5.

A more hopeful feeling was prevalent regarding cornsacks. It was known that there would be large shipments here, although they would be late. About 15,000 bales will be placed on the Australian market in ten days' time. Through December there will be arrivals totalling about 54,000 bales. This should relieve the tension considerably. Sales were made to farmers yesterday by the State wheat office of some sacks it was holding at 10/ net to rails. There should be some sacks for sale at 9/6 to storekeepers in about a week's time. For the census of cornsacks rather short notice has been given. The returns must be in on Thursday. Woolpacks sold yesterday at 4/3 net to rails. A little business was done in branbags at 9/ net to rails.

This matter has particular significance for consignees who caused appearances to be entered with the Prize Court at Capetown, and who may not have filed their complete proofs of ownership.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

A heavy demand ruled for new-laid eggs in Sussex-street yesterday, and as case eggs were wanted for Christmas requirements agents were able to advance prices. New-laid consignments commanded from 1/ to 1/1, while for case eggs 10d to 11d was asked.

The market was practically bare of medium-weight hams. Most agents are now fully booked for Christmas delivery. ## RAILWAY MARKET.

Fairly large supplies of chaff were forward at Alexandria yesterday morning, and this, coupled with the fact that the manifest showed that larger supplies were outstanding, was probably responsible for the listless attitude of buyers. The majority of the consignments offered were only of a medium quality, and agents experienced difficulty in commanding anything like reasonable rates. The few choice lots auctioned were in fair demand, and cleared at fair prices. A truck of new season's chaff from Trangie was passed at 4/5 per cwt.

In the potato section supplies were plentiful, and the demand was fairly strong. The market on the whole was slightly firmer than was the case towards the close of last week.

Consignments placed in position for sale:—Hay, straw, chaff, 130; grain 3, potatoes 41.

Produce manifested to arrive.—Hay, straw, chaff, 209, grain 8, potatoes 55.

HOMEBUSH STOCK SALES.

SHEEP.

MARKET BECOMES WEAKER.

There was a supply of 9721 sheep and lambs at Homebush yesterday, or about 600 more than was drawn for. The quality was only fair. There were a few heavy woolly sheep, the majority being ordinary trade sheep, with plain sorts scattered here and there. Shorn sheep largely prevailed. The yarding, which came from 38 owners, arrived in good order. Buyers attended in fairly large numbers, all sections of the trade being represented. At the early sales competition was keen, and the market was dearer for all classes, but as sales progressed quotations became lower, and the market finished generally weaker, except for prime heavy sheep, which were scarce. A draft of 111 merino wethers from W. Worthington, of Tullamore, made to 42/ and averaged 41/; a small line of cross wethers from the same owner realised to 40/, and averaged 38/3. Seven hundred merino wethers from W. W. Bucknell, of Coonamble, realised to 40/9, and averaged 32/2, while cross wethers from the same owner sold to 38/4.

Among the principal sales were the following:—From S. L. West, of Trundle, xb to 35/3; from Charlton Station, ex Tarcoon, w to 33/8; from C. L. Willcox, of Coonamble, shorn xbd h to 28/8; from O. H. Phelps, of Cryon, w to 33/10; from A. A. Comp. of Willow Tree, shown w to 30/3, from Wingadee Station, Coonamble, w to 28/11; from W. Worthington, of Tullamore, 111 w to 42/, avg. 41/; and 69 xbd w to 40/, avg. 38/3; from C. Clifton, of Tullamore, shorn xbd w to 32/10; from H. E. Randell, of Tareoun, w to 38/; from S. A. ### LAMBS.

The supply of lambs was a small one, and the demand was more than equal to the pennings. One line of 148 cross lambs from O. H. Phelps, of Cryon, made to 31/11, while another line of 101 cross suckers from Terry Bros., of Harden, sold to 27/.

CATTLE.

HEAVY CATTLE CHEAPER.

There was a yarding of 1451 cattle from 51 owners, representative of all classes, including a fair sprinkling of heavyweights and a larger proportion of useful trade bullocks. The attendance of buyers was quite up to the average. All sections of the trade, including mountain and coastal butchers, operated, and competition was fairly free at about late rates for light beef, but was dull and generally cheaper for heavy cattle.

There was a draft of 142 bullocks and steers, which came from A. McInnes, of Euabalong. They were an excellent selection. Twenty-two of these bullocks realised to £26/10/, and averaged £25, while the 120 steers sold to £17, and averaged nearly £16. Another large draft was 125 bullocks from Sidney Kidman, trucked at Bourke. They sold to £21, and averaged £19/17/9.

Among the principal sales were the following:—From W. H. R. Stitt of Forbes, 20 bullocks to £21, avg. £20/4/6; from W. G. Macchett of Condobolin, 19 bullocks to £24/1/, avg. £20/18/7; from Geo. Williams of Moree, 27 bullocks to £25/2/6, avg. £23/3/5; from C. Hutter of Murrumburrah, 8 bullocks to £25/7/6, avg. £24/1/3, from A. T. Creswick of Hay, 104 steers to £22/17/6, avg. £18/18/; from J. B. N. Osborne of Gunning, 11 bullocks to £21, avg. £19/7/5; from S. Donaldson of Warialda, 27 bullocks to £20/14/, avg. £18/8/, and 12 heifers, avg. £16/2/2; from A.A. Company of Willow Tree, 36 bullocks to £22/16/2, avg. £21/16/10; from Sydney Kidman of Bourke, 125 bullocks to £21, avg. £19/17/9; from executors of H. A. Duncomb of Willow Tree, 14 bullocks to £20/12/, avg. £18/13/9; from Pull Bros. of Gravesend, 38 bullocks to £20/15/, avg. £18/19/; from Sir W. Fairlie-Cuninghame of Koorawatha, 10 bullocks to £24/17/, avg. £22/17/; from S. and F. M. Payne of Blanford, 42 bullocks to £19/18/, avg. £17/4/4; from A. M'Innes of Euabalong, 22 bullocks to £26/10/, avg. nearly £25, and 120 steers to £17, avg. about £16; from executors of the late William Hay of Mullengudgery, 20 steers to £20/16/, avg. £20/4/.

DEATH OF MR. J. T. CRITCHELL.

A private cablegram has just been received from London announcing the death, on the 7th instant, of Mr. James Troubridge Critchell, who for many years was manager of the "Pastoral Review" in London, and who, in collaboration with Mr. Joseph Raymond, published the History of the Frozen Meat trade. Mr. Critchell was well known in Australasia, and had a large circle of friends. A few years ago he underwent a serious operation, and, although he passed through it successfully, he never fully recovered. Mr. Critchell was many years ago connected with the Union Bank of Australia, and was for some years located in Townsville, Queensland.

RUNAWAY TRAIN.

GOULBURN, Monday.

There was a sensational train bolt on the Southern line on Saturday night. A heavy stock train got away from control at Thirlmere, the brakes not acting, and travelled to Maldon, attaining a speed of 80 miles an hour. It covered eight miles in six minutes. The train was to stop at Picton, but it flashed through at a terrific speed. Fortunately there was a clear line. When the level was reached the driver was able to regain control. The escape is considered the most wonderful in the history of the line.

MINING.

The usual dullness surrounding business in mining shares at the beginning of the week pervaded operations on the Stock Exchange yesterday. Scanty attention was paid to most groups, but firmer prices were conceded in many instances. Copper propositions seemed inclined to weaken, and Hampdens sold forward below the equivalent of late cash prices, while Mount Lyell eased 1½d to 26/10½. Gold enterprises were on a firmer footing. Tyrconnell rose /4 to 1/9, and Morning Star advanced /6 to 13/. Westonias proved better property, and Deeps recovered /9 to 27/3, while Centrals steadied up to 15/6. Barriers were practically neglected. Junction North was the only stock appearing on the sale boards and commanded slightly advanced prices—up to 14/7½. New Burragorang rallied /7 to 6/6. Among Malayan tin dredging concerns Trong improved /3 to 11/6, but Kampong opened 1/ lower at 45/, and subsequently made up /6 to 45/6. Ronpibons were not favoured, and declined to 18/. Mammoth Molybdenite was still the most active stock on the market. The opening sale at 14/6 represented a recovery of /7½, but the price was not maintained, and the shares closed, after some fluctuation, at 14/3.

NOTES.

Ukalunda Minerals, Ltd., has been registered with capital of £10,000 in shares of £1 each, to acquire and take over Mineral Leases No. 29, Bowen, comprising 30 acres, and situated at or near Ukalunda, North Queensland, at present held by Mr. J. M. Flatau. The first directors are Messrs. R. Price, J. M. Flatau, J. L. Lawson, D. Lewis, and V. M. Flynn.

The Buckland River gold dredge worked 268 hours for a yield of 23oz 5dwt of gold.

The railway receipts of Chillagoe, Ltd., for the month of October amounted to £1929.

The Sulphide Corporation's report for the week ended November 3, stated that the mine was closed down owing to the shortage of coal. At the Cockle Creek works 531 tons of bullion was produced, containing 58oz of gold and 47,558oz of silver.

The manager of the Cope's Creek Central Tin-dredging Company reports two days rain, recording 243 points, at Skeleton Creek, and that work was partially suspended. Both plants are safe, and sluicing has been resumed.

North Broken Hill during last week treated 4000 tons of crude ore, assaying 14.9 per cent. lead, 7.5oz silver, and 18 per cent. zinc, producing 700 tons of concentrates, assaying 65 per cent. lead, 25.2oz silver, 7 per cent. zinc.

The Vegetable Creek tin mine produced 4 tons of tin oxide ore during the week ended November 8. Presumably the output came from the Gordon and Chandler shafts. Concerning Reid shaft, the mine manager reiterates the terse weekly report "pumping only," and the boring plant has advanced to 95ft in No. 33 hole.

The New England Gully Molybdenite Mine is turning out some good ore. The owner has a hand plant for treating the ore, and only the best ore is being treated. The lower grade of ore is stacked at tunnels, which are being driven into the hill on a 3ft reef, both drives showing good values in molybdenite, bismuth, wolfram, and copper. There is also scheelite on the crown of the hill.

The Briseis output for the month of October was 15 tons of black tin from the Derby mines, 1½ ton of black tin from the Mutual Hill leases, and 177oz of gold from the Wallace properties. The output was comparatively small, owing to the barges being removed to the new paddock. Dredges Nos. 3 and 4 have been closed down.

BROKEN HILL MINES.

BROKEN HILL, Monday.

A special general meeting of the A.M.A. on Sunday carried a resolution that after the completion of present contracts on mines no member or members shall take a contract for a longer period than one fortnight. Mining operations were resumed on the Junction mine to-day. All mines are now in full work.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

During the 48 hours ended at 9 a.m. yesterday the different weather systems have travelled a little over 600 miles eastward, which is below normal rate. The high pressure over New Zealand has shifted south-eastward, and is now centred to the south-east of Gisborne.

The Antarctic disturbance which was to the south of Adelaide on Saturday is now over Tasmania and our South Coast, while a "col" exists over the central and south-eastern districts of New South Wales, and also in the southern and central parts of Queensland.

The western high pressure has gained a considerable amount of energy during the past two days. At 9 yesterday morning the central readings, which were as high as 30.22in, were situated on the extreme south-west coast of the continent.

The northern part of Australia is still occupied by a monsoonal depression; but it appears to have spent most of its energies.

The present outlook is for a cool southerly change, with a few thunderstorms over the eastern districts.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally around Tasmania and on parts of New South Wales coast. No reports from the north-west.

SHIPPING COMPANY FORMED.

A company has just been formed in Sydney for the purpose of trading to Norfolk Island. The shareholders are mainly composed of men who have business interests in the islands. The company has completed arrangements for the purchase of a large auxiliary mailer, and are prepared to negotiate for freight to and from Norfolk Island. They have appointed Messrs. Nelson and Robertson, of Loftus-street, Sydney, as their shipping agents, to whom shippers can refer for all particulars.

The intention is to run a regular service, irrespective of full freights, as the demands of the island will quite justify this service.
